

Swain School students given new assignments

Dobson Street has become a dividing line for reassignment of students presently attending the Swain School. In a plan presented to parents Monday night, school officials announced that students presently attending the Swain will next year go to the town's other three elementary schools.

The Swain School was reopened as an elementary school in September 1981, after the closing of the Glen Road and Boutwell schools. At the time of the Swain opening, many parents objected strongly, and a series of tests were conducted on the building for asbestos and lead paint.

With school enrollments continuing to drop, the Swain is scheduled to be closed again at the end of the current academic year. Also, a report not yet accepted by the school committee, the NESDC report, calls for closing the Wildwood School in 1985.

The school plan presented to parents Monday night would send to the Woburn Street School all kindergarten students who would have attended the Swain. Grade school students between Dobson and Middlesex Avenue will attend the Shawsheen, and students who live on Dobson and those between Dobson and Tewksbury, who would have attended the Swain, will attend the Woburn Street School. The one exception to this plan is for 16 sixth grade students from the Swain who would have attended the Shawsheen. They will attend the Wildwood.

One parent who lives on Washington Street off Gandalf Drive said, "We live in a lost neighborhood. They don't seem to know where we are."

Supt. of Schools Dr. Carol Sager told the parents that she would like them to go look at the schools and see that there is essentially no difference between them. The curriculums will be the same, she said.

One question which was raised in the parents' meeting was, "What is going to happen to Mrs. Driscoll?" (Mary Driscoll, principal of the Swain.) Dr. Sager answered, "Mrs. Driscoll would like to know that too." Neither teacher nor principal assignments have yet been made for the coming school year.

At the end of the meeting, when parents were invited forward to express particular comments, six parents asked for their children to be transferred from one school to another. Two of the parents were not particular which school their children were sent to, as long as siblings were not split up. The assignments are not final and Dr. Sager has indicated that parents may make appointments with her to discuss school assignments.

Change Wildwood to Town Hall?

Considerable effort and discussion of future use of public buildings has taken place in recent weeks in Wilmington, but a meeting between the school committee and the selectmen on Wednesday night failed to produce any agreement.

With several members of the Board of Selectmen expressing a desire to use the Wildwood School as the town hall, there remains one stumbling block. The school committee plans to use that building as a school until 1985.

PLANNING BOARD NOTICE

The Wilmington Planning Board and the Zoning Advisory Committee will be holding a Special Public Information Meeting on Thursday, March 24, 1983 at 7:30 P.M. in the Library Conference Room to discuss the comparison of the present and proposed Zoning By-Law for the Town of Wilmington. All interested citizens are urged to attend. A copy of the Proposed Zoning By-Law is available at the Planning Board Office and may also be viewed at the Public Library.

At the joint meeting Wednesday night, Selectman Jim Stewart presented a rundown of possible uses for buildings, including the Wildwood as a town hall. School committee member Lester White said that while he agreed with the proposed uses, he did not agree with the timing.

In Stewart's proposal, the Wildwood would be turned over for a town hall after the present school year, and the Glen Road School would be reopened, to house students presently assigned to the Wildwood.

One large piece in the puzzle is the NESDC report, a study on Wilmington's school population needs, which the school committee has received, but has not yet accepted. The NESDC report calls for the closing of the Wildwood in 1985.

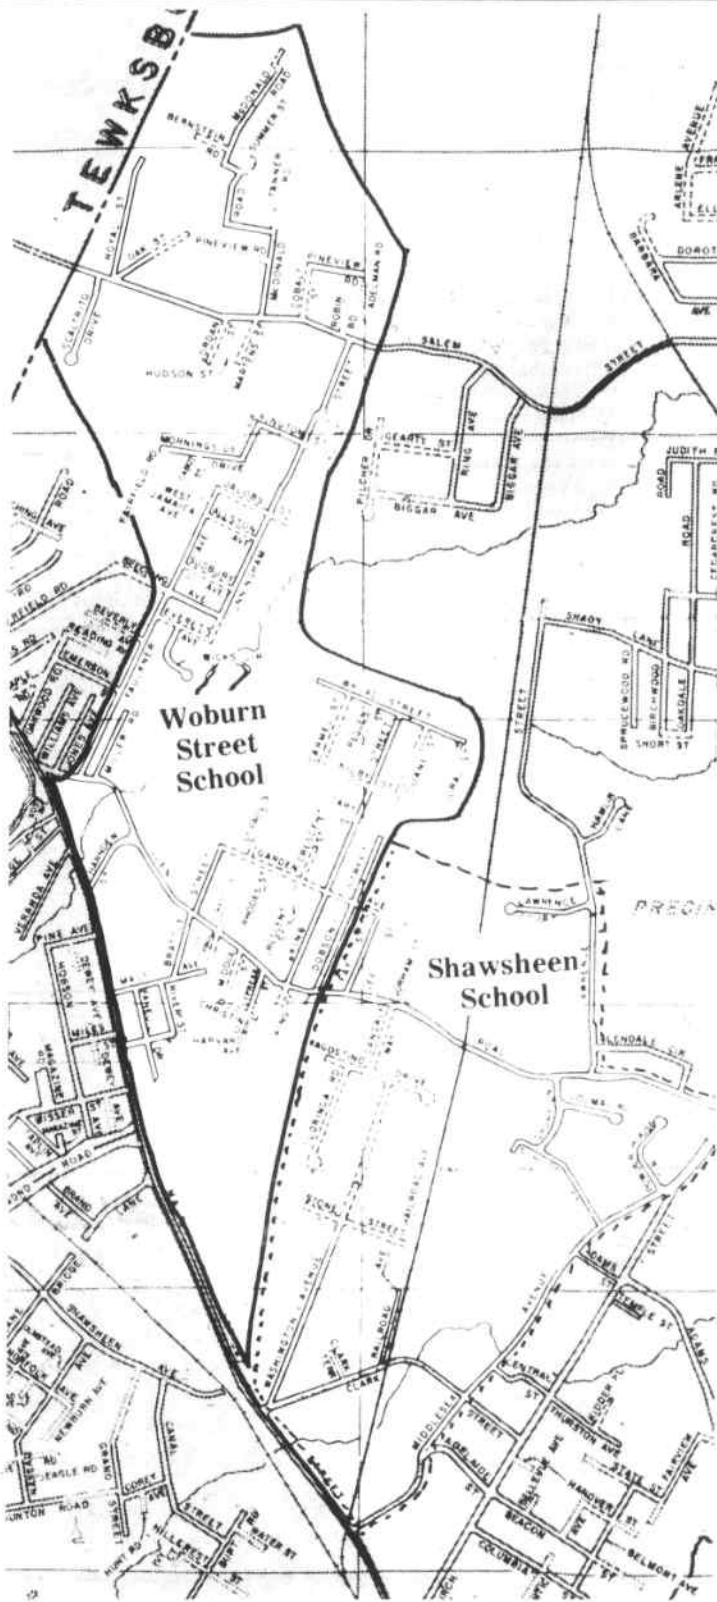

In the selectmen's meeting Monday night, Chairman Rocco DePasquale said that the "ball is in their court," i.e. it is now up to the school committee to act.

TOWN OF WILMINGTON FINANCE COMMITTEE PUBLIC HEARING

The Wilmington Finance Committee will hold a public hearing on March 29, 1983 at 7:30 p.m. in the Wilmington Memorial Library Conference room, on the Warrant Articles for the Annual Town Meeting to be held April 23, 1983.

This map of the Swain School district shows how the district will be divided for the coming school year. Students in the area at lower right, shown with the dotted line, will attend the Shawsheen School. Others will attend the Woburn Street School, with some exceptions in kindergarten and sixth grades. Police punished for breathalyzer change

The Wilmington Police Department has been rocked by the suspension of two men and the assignment of a third to five days punishment duty in connection with changes that were allegedly made in a breathalyzer test.

A hearing is scheduled for 3 p.m. Wednesday for Sgt. James Rooney, who was given a 15-day suspension. Town Manager Buzz Stapezynski has remained silent on the matter other than to say that a statement will be issued after the hearing.

Stapezynski did consent, however, to say "no" to any points of the story which the Town Crier learned from a source close to the department. Stapezynski did not deny any of the facts.

The charges stem from an arrest made two weeks ago by Officer Steve Parsons, who was working second shift. He arrested a local youth and charged him with driving under the influence of alcohol, after giving him a breathalyzer test.

When Parsons followed through with the proceedings against Kelly, he found that the test results had been changed, and that the arrest had been changed to a protective custody. After a subsequent investigation, Chief Bobby Stewart and the town manager last Thursday suspended Sgt. Rooney for 15 days, Officer James Burke for 5 days, and assigned Officer Pat King to 5 days punishment duty, i.e. working without pay.

What role each of the policemen is alleged to have played in the case has not been divulged. They all worked the shift which followed Parsons' shift.

Neither Burke nor King challenged their punishment within the allowed time limit. Rooney, however, requested the hearing.

Candidates' night piggybacks with special town meeting

This year's candidates' night of the Wilmington League of Women Voters has found a home.

When the selectmen asked Eileen LaBrie, the League observer at selectmen's meetings, when and where the candidates' night would be held, she said that a date had been selected, but that no location had been arranged. Last year's site, the conference room at the Regional Health Center, was too small.

After some discussion of possible locations, Chairman Rocco DePasquale asked if the League would be willing to change the night to Monday, March 28, and hold the candidates' night right after the special town meeting in Barrows Auditorium at Wilmington High School.

Mrs. LaBrie said that it sounded fine to her, and that she would check with her officers. The date has since been confirmed.

The night will be a busy one for selectmen. A selectmen's meeting will be held at 7 p.m., and the special town meeting will be at 7:30. After the special town meeting, the candidates' night will be started.

The special town meeting has only one article, dealing with the town's acceptance of changes in the agreement with NESWC for solid waste disposal. The NESWC group is ready to begin construction of an incinerator in North Andover, but needs to have the language in Wilmington's article of acceptance cleared up. It seems that the Wilmington Finance Committee had insisted on inserting a clause in the NESWC agreement, to protect the town. Bond counsel, however, has objected to that clause, and the bonds for the incinerator cannot be floated until the matter is cleared up.

In addition to the classroom sessions, a general display area, where numerous local businesses and agencies will offer information and materials, will be held in Cummock Hall, throughout the day.

Deadline is April 1.

Parking plans 'ver-ry interesting'

Two parking plans were presented to the Wilmington Planning Board on March 15, for signature. Town Engineer Bob Higgins termed them 'ver-ry interesting'.

One plan was the parking proposed for the new Sweetheart warehouse, to be constructed in back of Charlie's Auto Body, on Main Street, but across the B&M tracks. The warehouse plans show it to be eight million square feet. The land was rezoned nearly two years ago.

According to the current parking regulations in Wilmington a building of that size would require parking for 2040 cars, plus another thirty for the office staff, making a total of 2070. Those parking regulations are being changed in the new proposed zoning by laws, to be voted in town meeting.

Sweetheart Plastics presented their problem to the appeal board last fall. There would be, the appeal board was told, only a dozen or so warehousemen, plus the office staff, in the building.

The appeal board recognized the difficulty. It issued a ruling which said, in effect, 'You don't have to provide any parking'.

The plan presented on March 15 shows parking for about fifty cars. That is the total number needed, unless there is a change in the use of the building.

The new Avco building (Building No. 4) presented a similar difficulty. Much more parking space was called for than would be needed.

Avco has parking for 2414 cars. This is now 2390 because of the new building. Very few people work in the new building.

The problems were presented to the board of appeals last fall. The plan presented showed present and proposed future buildings. All the land was shown, down to and including the Lowell Street tennis courts.

A total of 4273 parking spaces was shown, including that which might be needed in the future. Avco can add as many as 2137 parking spaces, in the future, if needed.

But it is not necessary to do so now. That was the way the appeals board decided, and that was the way the plans were presented for the signature of the planning board.

Zoning revision includes PRD proposal

The Wilmington Planning Board and the Zoning Advisory Committee, after some months of study, and after several open sessions in which public comment was sought, will hold a special meeting in the Conference Room of the public library, Thursday, March 24. The meeting is scheduled to start at 7:30 p.m. The proposal to be discussed is that of new bylaws for zoning in Wilmington. This includes a proposal for condominium housing and proposals for better management of land and water resources.

There are new proposals on the frontage of lots, and the height of buildings. A new type of zoning, called 'hammerhead' lots is being proposed, to take up space in back of present residences.

New proposals for advertising signs and devices are to be discussed. New standards have been made for parking of cars. Parking regulations have been amended, to reduce the number of required spaces, in certain circumstances, and to provide relief, by special permit, of some places with too large parking facilities.

A totally new industrial park zoning is being proposed, in 80,000 square feet minimums, for office and light manufacturing, with limited associated uses.

The planned residential developments (PRD) being proposed are to come under a separate article, in the town meeting. The zoning committee, and all who have attended the meetings, several dozen persons, feel strongly that there should be PRD districts in Wilmington. The unanimous opinion was that the minimum area should be eight acres, and that there should be 50 percent 'open space.'

The standards being set are for single family detached and attached dwellings, but no apartments, with no more than six dwelling units in a single building. Each unit must be served by a separate entrance.

Unlike standard subdivisions, provision is being made for meaningful control, to be exercised by the town meeting, in the manner in which any specified PRD development is to be carried out.

The only item in which there is disagreement, at this time, in proposed PRD housing is that of sewerage.

As the proposed law is currently written, no PRD housing may be erected on any land not serviced by public sewers. Arnold Blake, former water commissioner, has pointed out that this would limit PRD subdivisions to the Silver Lake area, and parts of the west part of Wilmington. Those areas, he says, are already heavily settled, and have no areas for condominium housing.

Mr. Blake believes the zoning bylaw should be written to accommodate PRD in other areas of town.

Planner

Raymond Durling receives nomination to AF Academy

Raymond Durling, a senior at Wilmington High School, recently received a nomination for the United States Air Force Academy from Sen. Paul E. Tsongas. Raymond, the son of Arthur and Sandra Durling, has been a member of the honors program throughout high school and is currently ranked 18th in his class of 277. He is a member of the Math and Spanish honor societies and will be inducted into the National Honor Society this year. He is an assistant captain of the varsity hockey team and is a member of the varsity tennis team.

During my last campaign, one of my goals was to give consideration and aid to the senior citizens of the town. Since my election, I have fulfilled that promise. Like when the warrant article for $6000 came before the town meeting, I spoke in favor of the article which passed and increased the budget for the elderly. I obtained donations for senior recreation activities like the bowling league. And I have been a spokesman for important issues such as housing for the elderly.

My goals for this term are to continue to speak out for your issues. To work for expanded housing at Deming Way, and renovation of the Buzzell School into housing units for the elderly. As in the past, I will be accessible and concerned with your needs.

We have made a good start. Now I ask for your vote so that I can continue to do the thing which is important to me. Make your life better.

The Casket Lady — Part XXIX

"Bill Hen Two" never forgave himself

Copyright 1983
by Capt. Larz Neilson

Well before 8 a.m. on the 23rd of May, 1900, thousands of people were milling around on Main Street, Wilmington and on the grounds of the Hiller house. Those people came, not to mourn the death of France Hiller, but to enjoy themselves with the expected spectacle. Many carried cameras. It was to be a funeral, they believed, that would be remembered forever.

There had been four special streetcars, with spectators from Reading. There was one from Lowell. The number of cars that came from other towns is not known, but cars came from Woburn, Winchester, and Medford.

Those people were not allowed entrance to the Hiller house. They milled about in a circus atmosphere on the lawn, watching and waiting for the famous casket and for the catafalque from Boston, which had not yet arrived.

A Boston Post reporter called it "a big circus."

It may be guessed that Mary Hoban and Celia Sweeney Carter were on guard on the front porch to keep intruders away. Only invited mourners were admitted. Among those were Laura (Polly) and Schamiel McIntosh.

The McIntosh carriage was their own. The horses were all black, in conformance with the expressed wishes of Henry Hiller second.

The catafalque was due to arrive at 8:30 a.m. It did not show up, however until 9:15 a.m., driven by Charles Nichols. The reporters did note, at 8:30 a.m., that the sun finally broke through, an end to the rain and showers of the past few days.

The floor of the catafalque had been lowered 14 inches to better receive the heavy caskets.

Changes had been made in the pall bearers, all of whom arrived early. Undertaker Ed Nichols had 10 pair of white gloves, one pair for each pall bearer. Rudolph (Dolph) Porter and John Hoban were taking the places of Peter McMahon and Frank Boynton.

*Frank Boynton was a 16-year-old. Presumably he was an employee of Ed Nichols and had been temporarily named to be a pall bearer.

Peter McMahon, like many other Wilmington men, was a "provision dealer." That was the latest name for those men who had butcher shops in the barn or behind their homes, and who travelled daily from Wilmington to towns and cities outside Boston, selling fresh meat.

Each man had his own "routes." Those routes were closely guarded for fear someone else would try to take over. It was a lucrative business.

On Wednesdays Peter McMahon sold meat along the south Woburn - Winchester line. His customers expected him, and he wasn't intending to lose those customers by taking a day off for a funeral.

The casket, when it was to appear, would be coming out the "French" window, a window which no longer seems to exist. It would be carried to the porch rail and then to the catafalque. This was to be a part of the entertainment for the crowd of spectators.

Finally the elaborate floral tribute, with the clock showing the hour of 6:15 p.m. was brought out, and put on an open barouche. Then other flowers were brought out. Spectators on the lawn could see, through the French window, the pall bearers, receiving last instructions from Ed Nichols. The catafalque was ordered up to the front door.

The casket was an awkward burden for the pall bearers, owing to its weight and dimensions. After a few minutes a mahogany and brass ornamented end appeared in the window. The weight was being borne by the men at the ends. Those at the middle had a problem in getting close to the casket.

One of those men was Bill Hen Two Carter. It was a moment that he never forgot.

He was doing his part in holding up the heavy casket. He was also holding his hat in his hand as he neared the window. Suddenly a problem was his for the solving. What would he do with his hat while he helped to pass the casket out the window?

*Bill Hen solved the problem by putting his hat on the casket. No one seemed to notice.

Then he realized what he had done. It was, to him, a sacrilege to put a hat over a dead body.

Bill Hen Two never forgave himself for that moment. It was a sin for which he could not forgive himself.

The casket was taken to the rail of the porch, and for a moment it seemed to be resting on the rail. The spectators expected the rail to collapse, but it did not. Ed Nichols leaped over the railing and with some of the pall bearers who rushed out, lifted the big coffin, and the journey to the catafalque was continued.

The casket was pushed to a position in the center of the truck, and a screw driver and a couple of clothespins were wedged behind it to keep it in position.

The mourners occupied their carriages. Henry Hiller second and his brother Paul and sister-in-law being in the first carriage.

Polly and her husband, and other relatives were in the second carriage. Louis Surrette, Mary (Mrs. Dolph) Porter and Mrs. Charles Rose were in the third. The fourth carriage was all Wilmington French, John and Eugene Surrette, Mrs. Louis Surrette and Mrs. Jennie Babine.

In the fifth carriage were Celia Sweeney Carter and Mary Hoban, the guardians of the porch, together with a Miss Ring and a Miss Kenney.

Mrs. James Kelley, Mrs. John Kelley, Roseanne Kelley and a Miss Riordon sat together in the sixth carriage, and in the seventh were Dr. and Mrs. Buzzell, and Mr. and Mrs.

Charles Gowing. The Gowings were from Medford or Malden, but were well known members of a Wilmington family.

Thus the cortege started from St. Thomas Church. The pall bearers, with one exception, were lined up on each side of the catafalque. The exception is not known, but somehow he was left behind. He had to do a considerable amount of cross country sprinting to catch up with the procession on Church Street.

Dozens of carriages, wagons and other vehicles followed. Bicyclists darted through the crowd. Some of the crowd, it was noted, was dressed in a somber black, suitable for a funeral. Others were dressed in sweaters of all colors, and sports clothes.

The procession stopped, in front of St. Thomas Church at 10 a.m.

Carter home

The home of William Henry Carter, II, on Shawsheen Avenue, at the corner of Bridge Lane, in a photograph taken by Ed Nelson Eames in the very early 1900's. The home still stands today. The boy in the picture, near the wood pile is Robert Carter. Another figure, possibly "Bill Hen Two", and he seen moving in front of the left door of the shed.

letter to the editor

Dear Larz:

Monday night in the High School auditorium the parents received the news of another school closing. The Swain School children are going to three different schools this September.

The children from the Glen Road area are again bouncing from school to school. Families are being split. Sixteen children will be sent to three different sixth grades.

The same families show up for meeting after meeting and the results are always the same - they're moving the children again.

The parents brought up the points below:

1. Children closer to the Shawsheen School will be bused to the Woburn Street School.

2. Children closer to the Woburn Street School will be bused to the Shawsheen School.

3. If you are unfortunate enough to live in the middle (as I am), your children are sent to several schools - splitting up families.

Tell me - where is the logic?

Michelle DiNatale

Dear Larz:

I'd like to compliment you on your recent editorial (3-9-83) on housing - all-in-all it was quite factual and quite well written, but in all fairness I would like to comment on a few understatements or omissions.

First of all, since the housing authority has to post its meetings only 24 hours before they take place, I think it was rather unfair of Mrs. Larson to ask the citizens of Wilmington to give a written notice three days prior to a meeting to be allowed to speak at a meeting.

I have heard Mr. Theodos (my husband) say he thought Mr. George Hooper mismanaged the meetings which I consider to be the understatement of the year. Mr. Hooper not only has been rude to citizens present at meetings, he is even rude to the members on his own board at meetings.

Sincerely,
Robin Theodos

Dear Larz:

Having read your editorial of March 9, 1983, I feel a few comments are in order.

I think it was very good of you to praise Mr. Hooper, or was it a recommendation, for him, for the next term at the housing authority while at the same time condemning two of the other candidates.

Why didn't you tell the whole story of Mr. Hooper? How he added the rest of the housing authority kept trying to pull the wool over the peoples' eyes. How they kept saying that they would go along with the vote at the special town meeting, but turned around and decided to use Chapter 774 to force the town to go against their own vote.

As for downing Concerned Citizens I really think that you had better take another look around you. Every town meeting and special town meeting vote shows that there are a lot of people concerned about this town and not as you say only a very loud group.

Some people in Wilmington have a great sense of civic pride and duty and they care about the direction that the town is going in. They don't care just for one thing, they care about everything. Maybe you should judge the people running for public office on their merit, not on whether or not you like them.

I really feel that you owe Mr's Gillis, Parker, and Belbin an apology for the way that you referred to them in your editorial.

As for myself I will vote for the man who I think will be best for the town and who doesn't like to the people and try to keep the public from voicing their opinion.

Sincerely,
John K. Murphy

Dear Larz:

This is the time of year in which town politics reigns, more or less. It always amuses me.

There are many registered voters who never go down to vote. They are in the majority.

There are many candidates who want the people to believe how wonderful they are. They will tell you so, at the drop of a hat.

Me? I look over their qualifications. If I find they are honest and present a good program I might vote for them. It does not matter whether or not I care for the candidate as an individual.

Honesty in the candidates, and interest in the voters. That's an idea. Unfortunately, there is always a little larceny in the best of us.

Dr. Christian Bachman, scientist

The death of Christian Bachman of 10 Marie Drive, Wilmington brings to an end his research and study on a little known subject — laser radar. Dr. Bachman was an authority on the subject, known to scientists all over the world. Laser radar enables the user to "see" around corners, among other things.

Dr. Bachman wrote the first book on the subject, a technical engineering book. Since then he has written two more. He founded two firms, the Krybok Association and the Sensor Engineering Corp. He was the president of both.

His death is a severe blow to the world of engineering. It is also a blow to the people of Wilmington, for he had, in his few years as a resident served on the Conservation Commission, as a Trustee of the Public Library, and for a number of years on the Finance Committee, of which he was twice chairman.

Born in Portland, Oregon, in 1931, he grew up in a mountainous region of southwest Oregon, near the town of Sutherland. He was the son of the late Mabel (McCart) and the late Christian Bachman.

He received a bachelor of science degree from the University of Oregon, a master's degree from the State University of New York, and a doctorate from California Western University. For the first few years of his work in science he was engaged by several firms in southern California.

In 1965 he received a call from Avco in Wilmington. That company engaged him for studies in nuclear and heat physics. Avco was engaged in studies for Apollo, the placing of a man on the moon.

He joked about it, in later years. He and his family went by two cars through the southern states to New England. They happened to be in Selma, Alabama on the day of the Civil Rights March of Dr. King.

Bachman later said that he had received some "very hard looks" as the two cars in which the family was traveling went through Selma. The residents were not happy at seeing any strangers.

Christian Bachman

Dr. Bachman worked for Avco for some years, but found himself unemployed during the 1973 recession. He later wrote his textbooks on lasers. He founded the two companies, to work with lasers at this time.

He was a member of the Association of Old Crows, a serious organization of scientific type persons, but with a sense of humor. Their interest lay in the defense of the country.

He was also a member of the American Defense Preparedness Association, the National Society of Professional Engineers, the Armed Forces Communications and Electronics Associations, the Institute of Electrical and Electronic Engineers, and the American Cryptogram Association.

He served as a merit badge counselor to Troop 63, Wilmington Boy Scouts, and served the troop in several ways including their jamborees.

A communicant of St. Thomas Church, Bachman held membership in the Fourth Degree, Bishop Delaney Council of the Knights of Columbus, and the Rev. Edmund Croke Council 4982 of Wilmington.

Dr. Bachman is survived by his wife Joan Bachman, RN, a daughter Carol C. Bachman, and two sons, Thomas C. and David L., all of Wilmington.

DRIFTING TEETH

After you've had a tooth extracted, you may think your other teeth will stay right where they are, but that's not likely to happen. As soon as a gap is created in your mouth, the other teeth are prone to drifting, especially the teeth closest to the gap. This can cause some serious dental problems, including eventual loss of teeth.

When you have a missing tooth, there is a natural tendency for the teeth on either side of the gap to drift toward each other. This may happen so slowly and imperceptibly that you don't realize it's happening at first. With the drifting, open contact areas are created where food will collect, causing tooth decay. This can also cause gum infection and bone loss problems.

The drifting also throws your other teeth out of alignment, resulting in malocclusion or improper bite. This will decrease your chewing efficiency and put abnormal strain on your remaining teeth. Sometimes this results in jaw joint pain. If you have a missing tooth, you should ask your dentist what he would recommend to replace it.

Absentee voting explained

Tewksbury Town Clerk Elizabeth Carey has prepared the following press release concerning absentee voting:

Reason for voting absentee: You may vote absentee if you are a registered voter and will be unable to vote at the polls on election day because of absence from town during the hours the polls are open, physical disability, or religious beliefs.

Applying for an absentee ballot: You must apply, in writing, for an absentee ballot from the office of the town clerk no later than noon of the day before the election. Applications may be mailed or hand delivered. You may request the official application form or use any form of written communication (letter or postcard).

Include on the application your name, your registration address, the precise address to which you wish the ballot sent, and your own signature. Applicants must sign their own requests personally. You may apply for an absentee ballot now.

Requesting to vote by mail: After March 21 a ballot will be sent to any address you specify, including your own home. Be sure to apply early because the ballot must be sent by mail and returned by mail before the polls close on election day. Absentee ballots cannot be hand carried to the voter and the voter cannot hand carry the ballot to the town clerk's office or the polls. Absentee ballots must be mailed and postmarked both ways. Return postage must be paid by the voter.

Requesting to vote in person: If you prefer, you may request to vote in person before election day. You may fill out the application for an absentee ballot and vote at the town hall during the same visit. Tewksbury town clerk office hours are Monday through Friday from 8:30 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. and Tuesday evening from 7 to 8:30.

Notarization: Most absentee voters must have their ballot envelopes notarized. The only exception are permanently disabled voters who have a letter on file in the town clerk's office from their physician stating that they are permanently unable to cast their vote at the polling place because of physical disability. Physically disabled voters still need to request a ballot in writing before each election.

Student ballot envelopes may either be notarized or signed by the Registrar or Assistant Registrar of the college or university they are attending.

You vote privately in the presence of a notary who may not see how you vote or discuss your choices. A candidate may not notarize your ballot. Massachusetts notaries may not charge for this service. It is up to the absentee voter to arrange to have a notary present. Read all the instructions that are enclosed with your absentee ballot carefully before you mark your ballot.

And most importantly, return your absentee ballot promptly by mail.

Two juveniles face rape charges

Tewksbury police have charged two 16-year-old juveniles from Tewksbury in connection with an alleged rape of a 4-year-old Tewksbury boy. Police allege that three separate incidents took place while the juveniles were babysitting for the boy. The arrests were made March 9 at 4:02 p.m., just one day after the boy's mother reported the alleged incidents to police.

One male and one female juvenile have denied the charges, according to Sgt. Paul Johnson, but he said the two were arrested on "probable cause" after police talked with the boy and his mother. The two will face a hearing in juvenile court on March 21.

The male has been charged with rape of a minor child under 14 while the female faces charges of indecent assault on a minor child under 14.

Sgt. Paul Johnson and Inspector Robert Haines made the arrests.

Johnson said that the alleged incidents took place between the last week in January and the first two weeks of February, while the two juveniles were babysitting for the boy.

Johnson said the boy's mother first learned of the alleged incidents from the boy. Once told, Johnson says, the mother called police.

Johnson says that at least one of the two juveniles has been the boy's babysitter since the first part of December.

Tewksbury applies for sewer grant

The Tewksbury Board of Selectmen, acting as the board of public works, formally voted on March 8 to submit a grant application to the state for needed funding to get the Andover Street sewer extension project underway. The unanimous vote pushes the proposed $1.2 million extension project one more step toward reality.

Bill Mackey, from the town's water and sewer consulting firm of Camp, Dresser and McKee (CDM), told the board the state will not award the grant until they have assurances that all other funding for the project is in the town's treasury. Under the town meeting vote to go ahead with the project, the Metropolitan Life Insurance Company and the Tambone Corp., of Wilmington are expected to contribute funds for the project to the town. If the grant is awarded, the state will fund 50 percent of the project cost, or roughly $500,000, while the town will pick up the remainder of the cost to round out the project's financing.

Mackey told the board that the Metropolitan and Tambone money will have to be in the town treasury before the state will award their share of the funds. The board then voted to request payment from those firms.

Grange celebrates anniversary March 23

Wilmington Grange will celebrate its 76th anniversary on Wed., March 23 at 8 p.m. The anniversary will be marked by an open meeting at the Grange Hall on Bay Street, Wilmington. A fun night is planned, including entertainment and refreshments.

Grange was originally a farmers organization, but with fewer farms in the area, it has become a family organization,

Metropolitan has already given the town some $74,000 toward the design phase of the project that payment was made in the form of check on August 30, 1982.

In addition to the state grant form, the board also approved Mackey's filing of a notice of intent with the conservation commission for approval to work near a culvert that crosses under Andover Street. The board also okayed an application to the board of appeals for a variance on a small triangle of land near the Andover line that Metropolitan owns and will give to the town for a sewer pumping station. The board also okayed a letter requesting that ownership of that parcel be turned over to the town.

In related matters, the board also gave CDM approval to file with the state a proposed sewer ordinance that would govern the operation of the 18 mile long main trunk line that is now almost completed. Along with that ordinance, CDM also sent the state a draft sewer user charge.

Mackey said those items must be in place before the town has received 80 percent of the project reimbursement payments from the state. The items will be discussed at length at a board of public works meeting in the near future.

Heartland undertakes traffic study

Saying, "We realize there is a traffic problem," Jack Murphy, vice president of public affairs for Purity Supreme Supermarkets, owners of the Heartland Store on Main Street, Tewksbury, told selectmen on March 9 that the traffic consulting firm of Vanasse and Hangen has been retained to prepare a solution. Selectmen, acting as the board of public works, gave their unanimous consent to the study.

Murphy told the board that the traffic congestion trying to get into the Heartland Store parking lot will be studied with recommendations provided in the near future. He said Purity Supreme, which only rents the site from John V. Sullivan, will foot the entire bill for the study and will fund any needed changes. However, he stressed that since Purity Supreme only rents the property, Sullivan will have to give his okay for any changes.

Murphy said one of the solutions would be the installation of a traffic light near the entrance to the parking lot. However, the state must be petitioned for the installation of the light and strict state guidelines must be met. One of those state guidelines calls for a certain amount of car per hours flowing past the site of the proposed light. If that condition is met then the state will consider placing a full traffic light in the requested spot.

Murphy also said that he had "spent hours" with a group of neighbors to the parcel in an effort to establish a working relationship with them. Apparently the neighbors have several complaints concerning the Heartland operation and have been told that Purity may not be responsible for all of them. "Purity Supreme and Heartland seems to be in the forefront," when people want to complain about things around the parcel Murphy said.

Neighbors had complained to the board a few weeks ago that construction equipment has been using the roads in the area and Murphy explained that Purity Supreme has not been operating any construction equipment.

Murphy said, however, that Purity will be willing to install a fence around the border of the property to shield residents from the parking lot.

Murphy also said that Purity Supreme has been making detail officers hired by them available to the residents in the area when they are needed. He also said those officers will continue to be on the site at all times. One of the officers directs traffic in and out of the parking area from Main Street while another officer is inside the store at all times. The store is open 24 hours a day.

Robert Vanasse, representative of the traffic firm, told the board that a complete study of the area will be conducted with a recommendation furnished. He said that recommendation will provide a solution to the problem that "is best for the situation." He also said that a traffic counting machine will be placed on the street with the approval of the police chief. In addition to the automatic counters, a person from the firm will be making periodic visits to the area to count the cars manually.

Vanasse said that Purity Supreme will be footing the entire bill for improvements to the area and that the board of selectmen will have to become involved if the need for a traffic signal is found. He said that only the town can apply to the state for the light and that he will provide the needed procedure for doing so to the board.

Another potential solution is to widen the road at the parking lot entrance. That road widening will have to take place on land owned by Sullivan, however, and it seems he has enough land to do such a widening.

Selectman Chairman Dick Morris agreed that Purity is trying to work with the town, but added, "Something probably is going to have to be done" to alleviate the traffic problems.

Badge of office

Newly-elected Captain Bob Paulsen (left) of the Wilmington Company of Minutemen receives his "gorget", a metal collar piece which serves as a badge of office. Presenting the gorget is Phil Coolberth, a past Wilmington captain who now also serves as a colonel in the Middlesex Council of Minutemen.

Thanks, Bill

The first order of business for newly-elected Minuteman Captain Bob Paulsen was to present a citation from the Massachusetts Senate to Bill Doyle of Church Street Hardware. From left, Sen. Bob Buell, Bill Doyle, Phil Coolberth, and Capt. Bob Paulsen. The men are laughing at Paulsen's mis-pronunciation of Senate President Bill Bulger's name.

Pledge

The minutemen opened their ceremonies with the pledge of allegiance.

Marking the ballot

Sunday afternoon was sunny but chilly, typical weather for the Wilmington Company of Minutemen's annual drum-head election and installation of officers. After the previous year's officers turn their badges of office over to former selectman Jim Banda (left), each man then comes forward to mark the ballot. The voting traditionally took place on the head of the company drum, but a table is now used. Shown marking the ballot is the new captain, Bob Paulsen, a resident of Burlington.

Saluting new officers

The Wilmington Company of Minutemen salutes its new officers, at the conclusion of installation ceremonies, Sunday afternoon. The officers, from right, are Captain Bob Paulsen, Lt. Stu Neilson, Adjutant Sgt. Bill MacKinnon and Company Sgt. Marshall Bishop.

Mini-Minuteman

New water main proposed for North Street

Tewksbury Superintendent of Public Works Phil Pattison is proposing to install a 16 inch water main from Catamount Road to Andover Street. He will use some $318,000 in state grant funds already awarded to the town to partially finance the project, he told the board of selectmen, acting as the board of public works, on March 8.

The rest of the funds for the project, he said, could total some $371,000 from the town treasury if the job were contracted out.

However, selectmen asked Pattison to look into performing the work within the town rather than hire a contractor to do it. Selectman Bill Hallisey said, "I think it's (new water main) an excellent investment in the community, but we really don't know where we're (town) going to get the rest of the money."

Saying the installation of a water main is not all the difficult, he proposed Pattison research the costs of renting the needed equipment and have the town's public works employees install the pipe.

The proposed water main will bring water from the town's 1 million gallon underground reservoir located near the top of Catamount Road down North Street and to the intersection with Andover Road. There is currently a 16 inch main from the reservoir down Catamount Road to the intersection of North Street.

Pattison also said that an eight inch main running along Andover Road to the Andover town line from the intersection of North and Andover will cost about $100,000 to install. He also said that main should be installed when the proposed Andover Street sewer extension is built in the near future.

Currently, according to Pattison, there is no water main running from Andover Street at North Street to the Andover line.

The sewer main, like the new water main, will benefit the Metropolitan Life Insurance Company, who owns about 200 acres of land on Andover Street near Route 495 and who is also proposing to build a three building high tech office park on a 17 acre parcel off North Street.

With the addition of industry to the area, Pattison feels water service must be increased.

Metropolitan also sees the need for increased water service in the area and has proposed building an underground water storage tank in their tech park. That tank, Pattison estimated, will cost the firm about $100,000 to construct and will provide the office park with a back up water supply and sufficient water to fight a fire in the park. The tank will be hooked into the town's water system and will draw from the town supplies.

Pattison told the board he has asked Metropolitan officials if they would donate the $100,000 they propose to build their tank with in order to help fund his proposal. However, there has been no firm answer from the company.

Pattison says if the firm gives the $100,000 to the town then the town will be able to either reduce the amount of town funds needed to build the 16 inch main on North Street or use the funds to install the eight inch main on Andover Street from North Street to the Andover line. That eight inch main, Pattison says, will give Tewksbury another point to hook into the Andover water system in case of emergency.

Pattison also says that the 16 inch main on North Street will allow any rock well found in the area to hook directly into the system, will allow the town a point to bring more Lowell water into the system, or, if a water treatment plant is built on River Road, will allow the water from the Merrimack River to flow into the system.

Currently, there is an eight inch water main running down North Street to the Andover Road intersection. Another eight inch main runs from that point on Andover Road to Trull Road where a six inch water main takes over and runs from the intersection of Trull Road and Andover Street to the Lowell line.

The proposal, he said, would benefit everyone. "I know all the financial problems the town has," Pattison said in presenting the plan. However, he added that the town could get the project underway with a vote at an April special town meeting that he be recommended by called. He said the town could bond the project for 20 years with only one interest payment due in fiscal 1984.

Pattison agreed to research what the project will cost if the town does the work and will apparently be reporting back to the board with that information in the near future.

In order to get the $318,000 from the state, the town will first have to "upfront" the money and apply for reimbursements.

Wet!

Streams in Wilmington and Tewksbury have dropped a few inches since Sunday, and many cellars are drying out. But many homeowners are still experiencing unpleasant conditions due to the heavy rains of last week.

Homeowners, though, will have a difficult time filing claims under flood insurance, since in most cases, streams were not overflowing their banks. But many cellars were flooded.

Hardware stores quickly sold out of sump pumps, and anything that resembled pumps. Some stores restocked their supplies, and sold out again.

Firefighters were kept busy pumping cellars. The Wilmington Fire Department pumped about 40 cellars, and were unable to pump many others. Their pumps need at least four inches of water, or a sump hole in which to work. The Tewksbury Department of Public Works received about 100 calls for flooded cellars.

Between March 8 and March 12, there were 3.91 inches of rain. On the previous weekend there were 1.02 inches.

And while the rainfall was heavy, it was no record.

The heaviest rainstorm in this area, according to records of the Wilmington Water Department, and studies by Arnold Blake, was 9.43 inches, October 4 to 7, 1962. The next heaviest is that of "Diane," August 17-20, 1955 with 9.40 inches.

It was not even the heaviest rainfall for March, of any year. In 1936 the rainfall was heavier, and again in 1953.

But the fact that people got water in their cellars calls for more than mere statistics about rainfall.

People who have homes on hilltops, or hillsides, frequently get water in the cellar. They are living on rock, or on clay, and the cellar becomes a "dish" out of which no water will pour. The result is a flooded cellar.

People whose homes are in sandy areas, such as for instance, along parts of Whipple Road in Tewksbury, have better luck, providing that the cellar was not dug too deeply. That sometimes happens.

The best story the Town Crier has, on that subject, is when Peter Neilson, the father of the publisher, built his home on Glen Road, Wilmington. The home is of cement blocks, made on the site, and native field-stone. It was built in 1912.

The town clerk of Wilmington was Jim Kelley. There was no building inspector, nor was there such a thing as a building permit. Any man could build a home on any part of a lot of land which he might own.

Jim Kelley, who had a long pointed beard and was a fairly heavy cigar smoker, used to drive around town in his horse and buggy, just to see what was happening. He was a taciturn individual. Two strangers he appeared to be formidable.

Peter Neilson had "eyed" the water level of Silver Lake, and of Lubbers brook, which was behind the house. He was confident that the cellar hole was not too deep. The soil was sandy.

Jim Kelley came along, just as the foundation stones were being put into place. He strode into the cellar, not saying a word.

Jim looked around and then spoke. "Raise it up a foot." Then he walked out.

Peter Neilson went over to Silver Lake and took another look. Then he looked at Lubbers Brook. He was confident he was right.

But, just to be safe, he raised the level of that cellar six inches. Perhaps the white-bearded stranger knew what he was talking about.

Next spring Peter Neilson had six inches of water in the cellar of his new home.

Just us ducks

Saturday, residents at the end of King Street, Wilmington tried using a pump to drain a pond that had appeared in their back yards and their cellars. After the gas ran out during the night, a pair of ducks discovered a lovely playground. The pond is still there, but the ducks have gone.

Back yard cruise

Lake Sullivan isn't on any map, but it was certainly in existence last weekend, in a field beside 17 Aldrich Road. Shown in the boat are Larry and Kristin Sullivan, with Billy Sullivan on the edge of the water with the dog. There was 18 inches of water in their cellar.

CHILD sponsors candidates night

Combat Hazardous Illegal Dumping (CHILD), a citizens advocacy group in Tewksbury, is finalizing plans for its Candidates' Night program which is scheduled for Thursday, March 24, at 8 p.m., at the Tewksbury Junior High School on Victor Drive.

CHILD has compiled a booklet of biographies and statements furnished by candidates which will be distributed to all attendees. Twenty candidates are scheduled to be in attendance.

A table will be provided for each candidate's literature and refreshments will be served.

CHILD has announced that Atty. Patrick Plunkett - who moderated several League of Women Voters' candidates nights in the past - will act as moderator for the evening.

CHILD feels assured the result will be an efficient, smoothly run program that will be enjoyable and informative.

"Make it a point to attend this candidates' night presentation. It is important everyone make time in their busy schedule for this evening, and further, it is vital that they take an active part in Tewksbury's future. Come get to know the candidates and issues. Bring your friends. You are the necessary ingredient," says Beth Neudel,

CHILD spokesperson.

The town election is April 2, 1983 and CHILD urges all registered voters to vote in the election.

Absentee ballots are available through the Town Clerk's Office. A voter can obtain an absentee ballot for reasons of religious beliefs, physical disability or absence from the town on Election Day. Call Town Clerk Elizabeth Carey at 851-2383 for further information.

Webster Road gets tentative approval

The Tewksbury Planning Board and Atty. William Rambler came to an agreement last Monday on a road for a Webster Road lot, but the board will wait until its next meeting before taking a formal vote to allow construction to begin. Rambler will have to present the board with a revised plan and will have to negotiate a performance bond to assure the road meets planning board rules and regulations.

The road will run from the Webster Road - which is an unpaved "paper street" - lot to March Road for a distance of about 145 feet. Webster Road runs from Hill Street to March Road.

Rambler had appeared before the board of appeals for a variance to build on the lot on Monday, February 28. The appeals board granted that variance on the stipulation that the planning board approve a roadway for the lot. The appeals board further stipulated that the road would have to be built off March Road instead of off Hill Street. Apparently neighbors in the area were concerned that an access to the lot from Hill Street would add more traffic to what they called an already heavily travelled road.

Rambler said the owner of the lot, Jennie S. Lutes of Somerville, had no objection to using March Road for access though the distance from the lot to Hill Street is only 96 feet.

The lot is serviced with a small town installed water main that runs up Webster Road. That water service along with the layout of a paper street are required before the planning board can allow construction of a roadway for a single lot.

The planners also require that the road be 24 feet wide and be built with at least 12 inches of gravel base and three inches of pavement. However, Plan Engineer William Troy showed the roadway as only 16 feet wide and explained that the design was based in conjunction with the 16 foot width of March Road. He said he drew the plan that way so the two roads would be similar rather than "all of sudden seeing an airstrip here."

But, the planning board remained adamant that the road would have to conform to the 24 foot wide requirement.

Troy and Rambler will appear before the board again with revised plans and a performance bond agreement to assure the road will be built to board regulations.

Camp Fire registration

Tewksbury adults and children in grades kindergarten through four are invited to a special "Camp Fire Fun" registration night Wednesday, March 23 at 7:00 at the North Street School.

Children will enjoy free movies - adventure, nature and cartoon films with popcorn and punch - while parents learn more about Camp Fire. The program for adults includes a slide show about Camp Fire programs, a brief presentation, and registration. New Camp Fire groups will be organized.

"We know what the Camp Fire program can mean to a child and want to extend Camp Fire's opportunities to more children in our community," said Hazel Foster, Tewksbury Camp Fire chairperson. "To do that, we'll need the help of parents and other adults who are interested in providing these enriching experiences to Tewksbury boys and girls."

The Camp Fire program includes outdoor education, field trips, camping, community service projects, personal safety and home reliance skills, recreation, sports, creative arts and music and a variety of other activities based on the interests of the members and leaders.

Camp Fire, Inc. is a national, youth-serving agency for girls and boys ages six through teens. Tewksbury Camp Fire is part of the Council for Greater Boston Camp Fire, one of 300 such councils across the country. The Council is supported in part by the Merrimack Valley United Fund.

More information about Camp Fire is available from the Council office at 38 Chauncy St., Boston, Mass. 02111; 482-2230.

Spotlighter auditions

Wilmington residents with singing and dancing talent are invited to audition for the permanent touring company of the Silver Lake Spotlighters community theatre Tuesday, March 22 and Friday, March 25, 7:30 p.m. at the Congregational Church, Middlesex Avenue (Route 62), Wilmington.

The touring company consists of approximately 20 singers - dancers who perform selections from the best Broadway musicals in cabaret style. The musical revue ranges from soft, melodic ballads to rousing, foot-stomping, hand-clapping numbers and is planned to display a variety of musical styles and moods with solo, full company and featured soloist numbers.

The 1983 touring company season begins May 5 with a performance in Waltham for the Boys' Club and will continue throughout the summer at restaurants, companies and civic functions. Schedules will be flexible enough to accommodate members of the company who are unable to perform for every booking. While there is no remuneration for touring company members, mileage is paid.

Interested persons should attend auditions with a prepared piece of music and be able to show dance ability. An accompanist will be provided.

For more information call Celia Bartolotti at 646-2327, evenings.

Open house at Center School for IGE program

Parents of present fourth grade students in all Tewksbury Schools will be offered a choice of educational programs this month. To assist parents in learning more about IGE (individually guided education), an open house will be held at the Center School Thursday, March 24, at 7 p.m. The purpose of this open house is to acquaint parents with this alternative program in existence since 1972.

What makes the IGE Program offered at the Center School different? With the help of parent volunteers and two instructional aides, the teaching staff has been able to develop and deliver an individualized program to service the educational needs of each student.

At the Center School, pupils are assigned to a unit containing fifth and sixth grade classes. In the unit, pupils have a homeroom teacher and work with various unit teachers depending on their own learning style and ability. The IGE Program is characterized by programs designed to meet each child's learning style and educational need, by a high degree of parent involvement, and by a professional commitment to educational change and program development.

All parents of fourth grade children should have received a survey form and return envelope. Those parents familiar with IGE may simply record their preference and return their survey form.

Those parents who wish to learn more about the program may attend the March 24 open house. All survey forms should be returned by April 1, 1983.

Retire rich on someone else's money.

Ours. And Uncle Sam's.

If you have the money, a Massbank IRA is just about the best thing that's happened to the American taxpayer since the red coats left town.

If you don't have the "lump sum" cash you need to open an IRA, we'd like to introduce you to the Massbank Systematic Investment Saving Program. It lets you use our money to put federal income tax deferments (Uncle Sam's money) to work for you, earning a tidy nestegg for your retirement.

Here's how it works.

If you qualify for credit with us, we'll loan you enough money to let you take the full $2,000* 1982 tax deferment available to you through an IRA savings program...AND we'll loan you enough to start earning interest now on the maximum deferment available to you for 1983.

You can pay back the loan for both years on a systematic monthly installment schedule over 12 or 24 months. If you are in only an "average" tax bracket, your tax deferment savings for last year alone will easily exceed the cost of the loan for both years. In other words, you will already have made money by April 15.

But best of all, the money you borrow from us now stays in your Massbank IRA account, continuing to make money for you at top interest rates year after year...long after your initial start-up loan has been paid off.

If you start now, and stay with it through retirement, a Massbank IRA can indeed be the key to retiring rich while using as little of your own money as possible.

*Individual account

No Garden party for Redmen, Wildcats

Redmen fall in triple overtime, 3-2

The long day's journey into the shining light of the Eastern Mass. Division II hockey semifinals is over for the Tewksbury Redmen, a team whose 15-5-2 season finally came to a thud Saturday night at 3:09 of the third overtime when Falmouth's Bill Ferreira slipped the puck past TMHS goalie Ed Walsh for the 3-2 final.

The semifinal contest at Boston University's Walter Brown Arena was another showcase for the senior Walsh and his scrappy teammates. Walsh was just incredible throughout the tournament, proving the adage that a hot goaltender can take a team a long way in postseason play.

The Redmen co-captain made 32 saves in a 4-3 overtime victory over Dom Savio, 37 more in a 5-2 win over Duxbury, and finally 57 stops against a Falmouth team that outshot Tewksbury 60-30.

The locals did manage to give their 5'6" goalie a small pad at 6:53 of the opening period when senior Pat Tremlett pocketed the rebound of a Scott Thornton slapshot. Glen Fougere assisted on the play.

The defending Division II champs charged back with a pair of rapid fire goals in that first period at 12:27 and 13:47 to go ahead 2-1.

Senior Armind Dias pulled Tewksbury into a 2-2 deadlock at 0:44 of the second period with a nice shift and fake for a goal.

That's the way the score remained until the third overtime clincher, with Walsh holding fast with some incredible saves in the face of a rather steady Falmouth barrage.

The second overtime saw a pair of disallowed goals, one to each side for offsides infractions. Tewksbury junior Joe Seluk had a score wiped out at 4:24 of that period.

At 5:50 of that period Falmouth netminder McEvoy (28 saves) made a key save of a Fougere tip-in attempt, while it was Walsh's turn to come on strong in the final overtime before the game winning goal.

Redmen gain revenge

Earlier in the week the Redmen soccer players on this hockey squad gained a good measure of revenge with a 5-2 victory over Duxbury, whose soccer team had done a nice dance on the TMHS soccer club's face in last fall's tournament.

Walsh took control of the flow of this game early, coming up with some brilliant work on a Duxbury first period powerplay before a Seluk slapshot (Tremlett assist) gave TMHS a 1-0 advantage at 12:27.

The Redmen clung to that edge right through the second period, with Walsh making 22 stops along the way.

Fougere gave Seluk a nice pass two minutes into the final stanza for a 2-0 Tewksbury lead, but 22 seconds later Duxbury scrapped back to cut the margin to 2-1.

Walsh killed off a Duxbury powerplay later in the period before Tremlett scored a goal off a 2 on 1 break with linemate Seluk.

Duxbury did chop the lead again to 3-2 at 11:58 before the Redmen took control. This time it was Seluk from Tremlett and a goal that made it 4-2, and junior Dana Tower made a nice block of a Duxbury shot and converted it into a goal for the 5-2 final.

As was the case throughout this tourney, the Redmen were outshot 38-26. But for this scrappy team that was just a game away from the Boston Garden, the season was a superb one that saw an emerging star in Seluk and a senior goalie named Walsh who just about carried coach Joe Robillard's club to a title.

It was a stunner, to say the least. Leading 3-1 in the third period, Wilmington High School's hockey Wildcats saw Franklin's hockey Wildcats score three goals, two of them shorthanded enroute to a 4-3 upset in the Division II semifinal showdown Saturday night at Boston University's Walter Brown Arena.

The loss completed a wipeout of a possible Tewksbury-Wilmington championship game showdown Tuesday night at the Boston Garden. Instead it was a Falmouth-Franklin matchup for the second consecutive year.

The Wildcats appeared to be in control most of the way Saturday night, holding onto a 27-13 shooting advantage and in good shape going into the final period.

The locals completely dominated the first period, chalking up several powerplay opportunities and scoring when Bob Curran beat the Franklin netminder at 10:08 of the period. Dennis Moran, who notched a shorthanded goal in the second period, had the assist on the play.

Franklin tied the game at 1-1 early in the stanza before Wilmington caught fire behind goals from Dan Ward and Moran just 67 seconds apart.

Five seconds into the final stanza Franklin shifted its attack into second gear, getting a goal to cut the WHS lead to 3-2

Sports Notebook

Those deserving of praise

by Rick Cooke

It's the time of year when I dust off the buried notebooks piled around my desk and dig out some of the odds and sods of that wonderful world of professional, college and high school sports.

Several years ago I handed out some very informal awards, with this column as the vehicle. This winter there were some very deserving people who earned my respect, and I thought I'd give them a little something, even if that something is only a small word of praise in this column. Notice that these awards are confined strictly to Wilmington and Tewksbury. We all know that the best players and coaches come right from those towns anyway, don't we?

The coach of the year award in boys' basketball was a toughie, especially when the winner coaches a team that finished 2-18. Tewksbury's Bob Melillo is deserving of some mention here simply because going into his last game of a season played totally on the road with no gym in his first year at the helm, the kids were still very interested and motivated at 2-17.

The hockey award goes to Wilmington's Bill Cullen, whose tough taskmaster image has sometimes overshadowed the fact that he indeed is a very fine coach.

Doug Anderson gets the nod as girls' hoop coach of the year this winter. Although often bemoaning his team's lack of shooting prowess, Anderson took a big page out of the Tewksbury book and used tenacious defense with some good athletes to produce a super tournament team.

Boys basketball player of this past season was another tough decision here, and that process ended in a tie between the Wilmington High School senior backcourt of Jon Nolan and Ed Olshaw, a pair of solid athletes who developed into steady basketball players in their three varsity seasons under Jim Tildley. Their improvement I think was a big key to the Wildcats' first tourney berth since the 58-59 season.

Hockey player of this past winter was an easy decision. Tewksbury senior Ed Walsh was just the best goalie in the MVHL and one of the best netminders in the state. And I don't care what the kid from Billerica did. I'll take Walsh, thank you.

The girls' hoopster award has to go to Wilmington senior Karen Rowe, one of the smartest and smoothest players in the area.

The special Town Crier winter correspondent of the year award goes to TMHS track coach Dennis McGadden, whose prose was crammed with praise and criticism of a team and a sport that he genuinely loves. Dennis and Redmen soccer coach Steve Levine had to have been together in Journalism I back in their respective college days.

Interesting NCAA

This year's NCAA basketball tournament should prove to be very interesting. I like St. John's very much, but they never seem to go very far. Virginia and UNLV are my two real solid picks to get to the final four. Boston College might not get quite as far as they did a year ago, but they are definitely more fun to watch.

Ulowell needs fulltime coach

If the University of Lowell coach is ever to field a winning basketball team, a fulltime must be hired. The resignation of former TMHS mentor Tony Romano leaves the Ulowell job open, and a coach should be in the fold before April 1.

Former Celtics guard Chris Ford, who has taken a crash course in college coaching at Boston University and Boston College this winter, has been mentioned as a possible candidate, although as yet he has not formally applied. His name alone would bring in the recruits.

Umpires clinic

Tewksbury Youth Baseball would like to announce that it will hold its annual umpires clinic for all persons interested in umpiring for the coming year.

The clinic will be held on March 21, 28 and April 4, 11. The clinic will be held at St. William's School from 8 to 9:30 p.m. Tewksbury Youth Baseball is in need of additional umpires. Anyone who is interested in becoming an umpire is welcome to attend.

Breakers could give Pats a battle

From what I've seen of the USFL, the caliber of football is not all that bad, and very definitely is not quite on a minor league level.

The Boston Breakers, who open their home season this Sunday, could give the Patriots a battle. I'm hoping to catch a couple of the games at Nickerson Field.

The Record of the Week is very definitely Nick Lowe's Cruel to Be Kind.

A.D. Jack Barry, Massachusetts Institute of Technology; and A.D. Joe Zabalski and Asst. A.D. John Freeman, Northeastern University. Boston College Assoc. A.D. Ed Carroll sums up the attitude of these schools toward the games. "The games," he says, "are an excellent showcase for amateur athletic talent in the state. Everyone who participates, especially competitors, will benefit, and BC is happy to play a part."

Sporting events

The Bay State Games Committee has selected a wide variety of sporting events for the Bay State Games to ensure maximum participation. Amateur athletes will compete in 14 sports this summer in regional and final competitions for the games. The sports are basketball, cycling, diving, field hockey, gymnastics, road running, rowing, soccer, swimming, synchronized swimming, track and field, volleyball, weightlifting and wrestling.

Regional Directors

Bay State Games regional competitions this June and July will precede the finals and will take place at community colleges, state colleges, private colleges and high schools across the state, more than 100 sites in all. The Council of Community College Presidents and the Massachusetts Board of Regents were highly instrumental in securing the use of these facilities. For regional competitions, the state is divided into six regions - west, central, northeast, southeast, coastal and metropolitan. The Bay State Games Committee soon will appoint regional directors who will act as athletic directors in their regions. Many individuals are being considered but sports and community-minded people still have time to volunteer. Anyone who has a commitment to amateur athletics and knowledge of his or her community could qualify as a regional director. If you're interested, contact Bay State Games Executive Director Doug Arnot at 727-3227.

Honorary committee

No amateur athletic event could exist without the support of community and athletic leaders who give of themselves so everyone can enjoy the benefits of sporting activity. The director; Massachusetts Sen. Edward Kennedy; former Gov. Edward King; Bill O'Connell, WNEV-TV sports director; Coralie O'Connor, Olympic swimmer; Bobby Orr, former Boston Bruins star defenseman; former Gov. Francis Sargent; Dr. Edward Steitz, member, U.S. Olympic Committee and director, Olympic Basketball; John Thomas, Olympic high jump bronze and silver medalist; Massachusetts Sen. Paul Tsongas; Lesley Visser, Boston Globe sports writer; and Frank Zeo, director, Careers for Later Years.

Bay State Games are no exception. The Bay State Games Committee is particularly indebted to those who have agreed to serve on the Bay State Games Honorary Committee - Gov. Dukakis, chairman; Dr. Tenley Albright, Boston surgeon and Olympic figure skating silver and gold medalist; Joan Benoit, Boston Marathon winner; Dr. Edward Bernays, dean of the public relations profession; Massachusetts State Senate President William Bulger; Ron Burton, Boston Patriots leading running back; Cathy Corrigan, Olympic gymnast; Massachusetts Treasurer Robt Crane; Mike Eruzione, Olympic hockey gold medalist; Nelson Gifford, president, Dennison Manufacturing Co.; Don Gillis, WCVB-TV sports director; Curt Gowdy, nationally known sportscaster; Marvin Hagler, middleweight champion of the world; John Mavileck, Boston Celtics star sixth man; David Hemery, Olympic 400-meter hurdles gold medalist; Rolie Jacobs, WLLP-TV sports

Synchronized swimming

Synchronized swimming may not be as familiar as hockey, but will be part of the 1984 Olympics and the 1983 Bay State Games. Ruth Garand, coach of the Worcester YWCA Synchro-Maids, is coordinating competition in synchronized swimming across the state for the games. She says a good synchronized swimmer is equal to a good middle distance runner in endurance, strength and cardiovascular fitness.

Spring fever

It's almost that time of year when the Wilmington Softball League kicks off its season. The league has openings for new teams.

Kings clinch West title

In last week's Tewksbury Youth Basketball Junior Division highlights, the Kings clinched the West Division title by winning two games. They nipped the Suns, 33-32 after downing the Sonics earlier in the week.

In the East Division, the Nets clinched at least a tie for the crown by defeating the Knicks, 31-25 behind Tommy Aylward's 14 points. Brian Wahl and Chris Martin added three points each for the Nets, while Glenn Harris and Jeff Saunders played well on defense. Keith Sullivan was high man for the Knicks with eight points and Brian DeLuca tossed in six.

The Bullets upset the Pistons, 24-23 in an exciting contest. Charlie Cahri led the winners with six points, followed by Mike Gillette with four. Hugh Fitzpatrick had a game high eight points for the Pistons and Pat Romano added seven. Chris Bland and Rod Stetcher had good games on defense for the losers.

The Celtics closed out their season on a winning note, nipping the Bullets, 31-29 behind Kyrie Stevens' 16 points, Chris Sullivan's nine and Derek Leahy's four. Chad Golan and Jason Anzivino came up with good defensive efforts for the Celts. Charlie Cahri paced the Bullets' attack with eight points, followed by Stoddard with four and Kevin Ward with three.

The Warriors upset the Jazz, 28-20 in the final game for both teams.

The Colts pulled off the week's third upset, as they beat the Lakers, 54-52 in Senior Division play. Doug Noyes came up with an outstanding all-around performance for the Colts, scoring 12 points and hauling down 20 rebounds. Richard Prince added nine points for the winners, followed by Tim before another lamplighter just 50 seconds later knotted the contest at 3-3.

An unassisted shorthanded goal at 8:56 of the final pushed Franklin over the top, as the Wildcat attack was unable to push the disc past steady net-minder Keith Chambers.

Chambers came up with 24 saves for the game, while Wilmington senior Chuck Webster turned back nine shots on goal.

Wildcats hang on

Last week's 5-3 quarterfinal victory over a scrappy Cohasset team looked to be a blowout early, with the Wildcats jumping to a 4-0 lead after two periods and looking to cruise home. Instead the game became a real battle before coach Bill Cullen's crew righted itself to advance in the tournament.

Three unanswered Cohasset goals, the last coming with less than two minutes left to play in the game, sent the Wildcats scrambling before an empty net score by Kevin Smith with 21 seconds left iced the victory.

Jim Smith got the Wildcats off with a goal and a 1-0 lead at 2:40 of the opening period and Frank Newark made it 2-0 a minute later off a scramble in front at 3:45.

The Wildcats' lead ballooned to 3-0 later in the first period when Newark scored again at 10:21. A brilliant Dennis Moran rush and his pass to Jim Smith upped the count to 4-0 Wilmington at 3:49 of the middle period.

From that point on it was batten down the hatches Wilmington and goalie Chuck Webster, with Cohasset pressing the attack by pulling its goaltender with just under a minute to play.

Wilmington completed another super season at 17-5-1 with a batch of very talented hockey players and a coach who has again proven that he is one of the very best in the business.

Developer seeks Concord Street rezoning

The Zussman Development Group of Newton Center proposes to rezone land in Wilmington, off Concord Street, to industrial. The group presented plans to the Wilmington Planning Board on March 15th.

The land owned by Zussman is mostly in North Reading. It consists of the former quarry of the Drinkwater brothers. It is 70 acres in area, and the former site of a hill which was cut down by Drinkwater.

A small portion, possibly ten percent, is in Wilmington, easterly of Route 93. That land is zoned residential. The North Reading land is zoned for industry.

Zussman is planning what may be called an industrial park. The buildings would be used for office use, and research and development, the planning board was told. In the Wilmington area the firm is planning the construction of two buildings, totalling about 120,000 square feet.

An article is being prepared for the annual town meeting, to ask for rezoning the land in Wilmington.

Old North Church bells quiet

Local construction firms donate skills, equipment to help move the bells

By Rushworth M. Kidder
Staff writer of
The Christian Science Monitor

Boston
For the first time since 15-year-old Paul Revere helped ring them, America's oldest "peal" of bells has come down to earth.

The eight little-known bells in Boston's Old North Church tower — where Paul Revere later hung the twin lanterns that signaled the start of the American Revolution in 1775 — were swung out of their belfry March 2 as part of a $110,000 project to rebuild the aging wooden frame and bell headstocks.

Cast in England in 1744, and predating the Liberty Bell, the bells weigh up to three-quarters of a ton apiece. "They represent the first peal of bells in the Western Hemisphere," says the Rev. Robert W. Gollidge, vicar of the Old North Church, who describes them as "a precious treasure that really belongs to this country."

Last restored in 1894, the bells lay silent for most of this century. The church, which began raising money last year to refurbish the fittings, was well behind its goal when the Associated General Contractors of Massachusetts heard of the project. The AGC, a trade group of construction firms, asked its members to contribute labor and equipment.

"So many people offered to help," said Donald Blair of Vappi & Co., "that there weren't enough things for them to do."

One firm sent the bright red crane that filled narrow Salem Street in front of the brick church. Others contributed rigging, trucking, masonry, painting, and insurance — and even a protective iron fence to surround the bells at Boston's Museum of Science, where they will be displayed for the next three months.

The bells will be back in place in time to ring on Sept. 3 — the 200th anniversary of the signing of the Treaty of Paris, which ended the Revolutionary War.

Noted columnist/humorist

Art Buchwald at NEMH

Readers of his column, carried in 525 newspapers, and his 19 books know that Art Buchwald has been saying crazy things that make sense for a long time.

The Pulitzer-Prize-winning commentator will bring his wit and wisdom to a benefit luncheon for New England Memorial Hospital on March 28, announces Linda Bouchie, president of the hospital Auxiliary which is sponsoring the fund raiser.

Donation tickets are $20 per plate for the Monday luncheon at the Hilton at Colonial-Pages

Restaurant in Lynnfield. Tickets can be purchased at the Gift Shop, Volunteer Department, or Public Relations at New England Memorial. However, ticket sales close on March 21.

"We're planning for a sellout," said Jean Heald, co-chairperson of the planning committee. The Auxiliary is also hoping that individuals and businesses will help sponsor the luncheon by making tax-deductible donations of $100 or more.

The money the Auxiliary raises at the "Lunch with Art Buchwald" luncheon will benefit the Maternity Unit at the Stoneham Hospital. The unusual growth of the hospital's maternity services in the last few years has spurred the need for new diagnostic equipment. Buchwald returned to the United States in 1962 and lives now in Washington, D.C. Last year he was awarded the Pulitzer Prize for outstanding commentary.

ROVING

The tragedy of rape in New Bedford

When I first heard about that deplorable gang rape at Big Dan's Bar, in New Bedford, a week ago, I was fiddling with my car radio as I headed to work. I tuned in the story just as all the details were beginning to break. At first I thought I was listening to a movie critic describe a terrible film, but then after giving the man on the radio a little more time, I realized he was a newsman reporting the gruesome facts about a young women's two-hour ordeal at a bar in New Bedford.

She had stopped into Big Dan's Bar to pick up a pack of cigarettes, met a friend and decided to stick around for a drink. When she got up to leave, she was halted at the door by a thug, who forced her into a circle of other thugs. They held her on a pool table and proceeded to repeatedly rape and terrorize her for two hours. All this while the bartender and patrons stood by and watched. Some reports say they actually cheered while all this madness took place.

It is hard to believe that in this so-called civilized society we live in an incident of this horrendous magnitude could take place. Rape in itself is unacceptable to normal, healthy individuals. But what happened on that Sunday night in New Bedford transcends every rational fiber of reason: we cannot sit back and allow rape to take place while people stand around enjoying it.

With that in mind, it is hard to understand why those responsible for such an act were permitted to go free on their own personal recognizance (the $1000 bail is a travesty of justice; once probable cause was established, they should have been kept in custody, and to assure their confinement, their bail should have been set at some astronomical figure). Would a pack of mad lions be allowed to wander the streets of New Bedford, if they'd been caught after just mauling a young child? This society of "civilized" human beings relies on the judgement of those who reign high over our courts of law to make the right decisions to protect us, to assure us that the parameters of civilization remain in tack. Now consider that this system of justice made a bigger deal out of John DeLorean's obsession with cocaine than it did out of that incident in New Bedford.

As this column is being written a march is being planned in New Bedford to protest what happened at Big Dan's Bar. Meanwhile, the bar itself is closed, and its license to operate has been surrendered to the city's liquor licensing board, with the likelihood that the bar will never re-open. Calls for the bartender on duty that night to be prosecuted for failing to summon help are coming from local residents, but since he claims the rapists held him and the rest of the patrons at bay with a knife, it isn't likely that any charges will be brought up against him. (This contradicts the stories given by other patrons, who claim there was actually cheering going on during the ordeal.)

It is also difficult to believe that there are still others who have responded with the same dangerously frightening comments that often follow incidents of this type: the girl probably deserved what she got. It was a scummy bar, the people who hung out there were scummy, so she should have known better than to

CORRECTION

The headline and photo caption accompanying the Austin Prep story in last week's Middlesex East Supplement were in error. Austin Prep will be holding an Entrance Examination, not an Open House, this weekend. The local prep school holds only one Open House each year, in the fall. There is, however, an annual spring Entrance Exam, scheduled this year for Saturday, March 19, at 8:30 a.m. Preregistration is not required for this exam, which will be administered at the school on Willow St. in Reading. This exam is for students who wish to apply for admission in September of this year.

Sat. April 30th

Health Works comes to Wilmington

Saturday, April 30, from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. at the Regional Health Center.

"Health Works '83" follows last year's tremendous success with "Health Works," about 100 health fairs that serviced over 23,000 people in Massachusetts.

The Regional Health Center in Wilmington has been chosen as the local site for "Health Works '83," a series of community-based health fairs to be held around Massachusetts, April 25-May 1.

"Health Works '83" will take place on

At a time when medicine is increasingly mystifying and costly, "Health Works '83" sponsors (Shawmut Banks, WCVB-TV, WHDH radio, the American Red Cross and the National Health Screening Council for Volunteer Organizations, Inc.) seek to make health care as convenient and accessible as possible.

The purpose of the screenings is to reduce the incidence of disease through early detection, emphasizing individual responsibility for one's own health, providing health awareness education and by following up on participants. Health Works is not intended in any way to replace an examination by a physician; it is a health promotion measure and an opportunity to learn about one's own health.

The Regional Health Center's health fair, like those throughout Massachusetts, will offer free medical screening and basic health maintenance information. The basic screening includes: height, weight, blood pressure, anemia and vision. Other services include health exhibits, podiatry screening, oral cancer screening, individual review and referral.

All "Health Works '83" sites will offer an $8.00 blood chemistry test that screens for diabetes, cholesterol, triglycerides, kidney and liver disease, gout and thyroid problems, a work-up that costs over $100 at other health facilities.

The "Health Works '83" fair in Wilmington is coordinated by Beth L. Goldberg, community health education coordinator and assisted by Jean Eiranova, R.N., a Wilmington resident currently completing requirements for her B.S.N. degree at Northeastern University and interning at the Regional Health Center.

Medicare general enrollment period

From January 1 through March 31 is the general enrollment period for the medical insurance part of Medicare, Dover C. Crawford, Social Security district manager in Malden, said recently. During these 3 months people who failed to sign up when they had the opportunity to do so, or who dropped their coverage, can again enroll. Coverage will begin July 1, 1983.

Medicare medical insurance helps pay doctor bills and other medical expenses not covered by Medicare hospital insurance. To obtain medical insurance coverage, a person must pay a basic monthly premium which is set at $12.20 through June 1983. This will increase to $13.50 for the 12-month period beginning with July 1983. For people who could have had medical insurance earlier but failed to sign up, the premium is generally higher, however. The additional cost is 10 percent for each year the person could have had coverage but was not enrolled.

More information about Medicare medical insurance can be obtained at any Social Security office. The Malden office is located at 200 Pleasant Street. The telephone number is 227-2400.

Melrose Hospital offers stress tests

Wearing grey sweat pants, sweatshirt, and a pair of jogging shoes, a man of about 42 entered Melrose-Wakefield Hospital and took the elevator to the second floor.

This was an important day for Ted Swanson (not his real name). He was about to undergo a stress test that would reveal whether the numbness in his left hand was an indication of heart trouble.

A stress test measures heart rate while a patient exercises vigorously on a tread mill. That's why Swanson, who usually dresses in business suits on weekdays, was dressed so informally. The test simulates a rigorous jog of about thirteen minutes.

MWH has performed stress testing since October 1974 when only ten or fifteen tests were done each month. Within the last two years, however, the hospital averages 29 to 35 tests per month, according to Mary Tompkins who heads the MWH Electrocardiogram (EKG) Dept. Last year MWH purchased a new Stress EKG System from Inter-Medical Corp. The modern, more efficient technology as well as increased technical know-how are two reasons for the growth in stress testing at MWH, according to Tompkins.

As Cardiologist Jack Berg, M.D., further explained, "modern cardiology dictates that an evaluation of every cardiac patient should include stress testing."

The procedure begins with an EKG test — a way of measuring the heart's activity — while the patient is at rest. Twelve electrodes that register the electrical current generated by heart beats are affixed to the patient's chest with a gel which provides good surface contact. Once the resting heart beat is recorded, the patient is ready to begin the stress test.

Ted Swanson discovered quickly why the procedure is called a "stress" test. It begins at a slow steady pace which gradually increases. Swanson was forced to go from a level walk to an uphill jog and became visibly taxed — beads of perspiration on the forehead, heavy breathing and a taut face revealed his physical stress. The EKG monitor registered his maximum heart rate of 170 beats per minute — well within the normal range for a man of his age.

Swanson's cardiologist, Allen Criss, M.D., who monitored the test gave Swanson a favorable diagnosis — a healthy normal heart. The assurance was a relief, Swanson said.

Generally stress tests are given to people with suggestive symptoms such as numbness or pain in the arm, jaw, or back, chest pain or pressure, and heart palpitations. They are also given to heart attack patients after recovery as a way of monitoring any changes. Patients must be referred by their physician.

3R'S

To help parents deal with second term report card blues, the Learning Disabilities and Reading Clinic of Arlington and Wilmington is once again offering individualized instruction this Spring in the three R's — reading, writing, and arithmetic. Fifty students from the Greater Woburn area have benefitted from instruction at the Clinic over the past year.

Diagnostic testing and study skills classes, as well as S.A.T. Prep. for the May 7 S.A.T. exam, will also be offered at nominal fees, as the Clinic continues to uphold its philosophy of serving the educational needs of the community at the lowest possible cost.

The focus of study skills instruction is to teach students to deal more effectively with their schoolwork. Many students have potential to do good work, but only lack skills of effective studying, such as outlining, notetaking, test preparation, and time management.

Clinic teachers hold Master's degrees in their areas of expertise. The combined staff has a background in reading, learning disabilities, English, math, writing, and study skills. The Clinic tries to maintain a two-to-one ratio of students to teachers.

The Clinic has been serving area residents for nearly five years. Students attend one or more two-hour sessions per week, after school or on Saturdays. Parent conferences are held after testing to discuss the student's levels and formulate an individualized curriculum. For more information, call Melissa Goerdt at 631-5354 or 658-3169.

It includes extensive review of laws, rules and regulations on real estate in Massachusetts, as well as mathematics, terminology, transaction and instrument preparation.

Students will use the "Handbook for Real Estate Examination and Practice" written by Association Executive Vice-President Milton H. Shaw of Boston. There is a fee for the course.

Both food and merchandise concessions will be present for the public. Hours for admission are 10:00 A.M. to 5:00 P.M.

These third annual "Revels" are given in celebration of the vernal equinox, the official commencement of spring and merriment. Singing with choral society are Reading residents Joan Allen and Terry Rawlins.

The regional semi-professional chorus now 13 years old is comprised of singers from 14 towns and is under the musical direction of Marie Stultz. The chorus has performed widely in the North Shore and Greater Boston areas.

BABYSITTING COURSE

A seven-week Babysitting Course for boys and girls age 12 and older will be held at the Lawrence Memorial Hospital of Medford beginning Tuesday, April 19. The class will meet for seven Tuesdays, from 3:30 — 5 P.M. at the LMH School of Nursing, 170 Governors Avenue, Medford.

The course is conducted by LMH School of Nursing Instructors and student nurses in cooperation with the LMH Department of Nursing Service. Topics to be covered include infant and child care, fire and personal safety, nutrition and the medical aspects of babysitting. A choke-saving demonstration will also be included. Students who successfully complete the course will be awarded the "LMH Babysitters Certificate" at the final class on May 31. There is a $10 fee for the course and registration is required.

For more information, or to register for the course, contact the LMH Public Relations Office at 396-9250, ext. 1633.

SUMMER CAMP

The Massachusetts Easter Seal Society's Greater Boston regional office is accepting referrals for its residential summer camping programs for children with physical disabilities.

Agassiz Village in Poland, Maine offers four, two-week sessions for boys and girls between six-17 years old. Camp Hemlocks, in Connecticut, conducts a ten day program for severely disabled young adults, ages 18-25-years old.

Trained counseling and nursing staffs are available at both facilities. Specially adapted facilities are designed to provide campers with individualized attention. Both camps are wheelchair accessible. Activities include swimming, archery, wheelchair sports, arts and crafts and field games. A low counselor to camper ration enables all activities to be adapted to enable each camper to participate at his or her ability.

At Agassiz Village campers are integrated in many activities with able-bodied youngsters. Many Easter Seal campers have able-bodied brothers and sisters who attend Agassiz Village with them.

Transportation is provided to and from Maine each session with a central pick-up location at the Newton Holiday Inn. Camperships are available for qualifying youngsters.

For more information and an application call 482-3370 or toll free in Worcester, 1-800-922-8290 or write to Massachusetts Easter Seal Society, 934 Statler Office Building, Boston, Ma. 02116.

Volunteer parent aides needed

Being a parent is very stressful, especially for new single or young parents who may feel lonely or isolated. Parents frustrated by daily living conditions can feel better about themselves and their abilities when there is someone to share the stresses as well as the good times.

Volunteer parent aides are needed to provide support, nurturing, warmth and acceptance on a weekly basis to parents in the community. The aide serves as a friend, advocate and role model to the parent.

Through this meaningful, trusting relationship, the client can build her self-esteem and thereby become a more effective parent.

Aides will be matched with a client and are required to visit them; and attend a group supervision meeting on a weekly basis. Before meeting the client, the aide will be offered training sessions.

The Parent Aide Program Task Force, sponsored by the Department of Social Service, in cooperation with the Mystic Valley Council for Children, the Regional Health Center in Wilmington and Winchester Hospital, requires a one-year commitment from Parent Aides.

As a link to a less isolated and more social world, the parent aides may choose to take the client out each week — shopping, to the library, to lunch or to participate in a recreational activity. Funds have been made available to reimburse the aides for these stress-reducing activities.

An orientation program will be held in March for interested parent aides. For more information, please contact Monique Doelling at the Department of Social Service in Arlington at 641-1780.

A commitment, a willingness to share and listen enables a parent aide to help a client with difficulties become a more effective parent.

Tufts names new arena for Winchester man

The name of Marston Balch, professor emeritus, master teacher and one of the founding members of Tufts University's drama department and pioneers in the use of the arena stage in academic theater in this country, will be given to a new arena theater at Tufts, to be funded in part through a $1 million gift from a former student.

The gift, made by 1952 Tufts alumna Elizabeth Bottomley Noyce of Medomak, Maine, was announced during a recent dinner on the Tufts campus.

The first phase of a five-phase drama facility, the new arena is planned as a $1.9 million, 350-seat theater — about 150 seats larger than the university's current arena theater — with a larger performance space and a greater electrical capability than the existing structure. It is expected to be part of a larger arts complex which would include a variety of performance spaces for theater, music and dance, as well as a new art gallery.

Future phases of the drama facility, beyond the theater to be named for Balch, are expected to include a multiple-use space to serve as a flexible theater, rehearsal hall and TV studio; an experimental theater; costume and scenery shops, faculty offices and possibly classroom space.

In commenting on her gift, Noyce explained, "Marston Balch was and is a master teacher, whose dedication to excellence in the teaching and practice of drama touched the lives of thousands of students. So many of us, participants and audience alike, shared in the magic of the Tufts Arena Theater, that I felt it was important to pay appropriate tribute to him. What better way could there be than for the new theater, which will be the focus of so much joyful activity in the future, to bear his name?"

"In making my own gift for this purpose, obviously it is my hope that others who have known Professor Balch over the years and whose lives have been touched by his work will also support this project."

Tufts President Jean Mayer, dean of American drama critics Elliot Norton and distinguished actor Howard DaSilva and his wife, Nancy (Nutter) DaSilva, a classmate of Noyce at Tufts, were among those on hand to toast Balch, who has been a proponent of the arts on campus since he first joined the Tufts faculty as an assistant professor of English in 1934.

The 81-year-old professor emeritus, a Winchester resident, spent 35 years at Tufts, where he led the university's drama program through its formative stages as a department which he would head for 26 years. He also spearheaded the conversion of an old golf clubhouse on campus into the current arena theater, which besides housing the university's nationally reputed drama department is the home of the Tufts Summer Theater, a professional company which will present its 39th season this year.

Expressing his opinion on the importance of Noyce's gift, Balch commented, "My colleagues and I hold a strong belief in the role of the arts, both in education and in life. No one really knows what compelling forces are brought into play when you begin to deal with creative powers...In his Herakles, Archibald MacLeish has Miss Parfit, a governess, say, 'In history, everything was true once,' whereupon her charge, Miss Hoadley, says, 'In story, nothing was true once, only always.' So it is with drama. Fine drama in the theater has this power of being eternally true, forever fresh and relevant...When playwrights stop writing, then actors stop acting, directors stop directing and a vital mainspring of our culture dries up."

Noting that the anecdote illustrated his attitude toward the future of drama at Tufts, Balch told the story of a Washington, D.C., cab driver who when asked the meaning of "What is past is prologue," the inscription on the National Archives Building, told his fare that it was government language for "Brother, you ain't seen nothing yet!"

WHAT'S IN A NAME? Often great honor, as Winchester resident Marston Balch (right), shown with his wife, Roberta Balch, and with Tufts University President Jean Mayer, learned recently, when he was told that a new arena theater on the university's campus will bear his name. The honor is the result of a $1 million gift to Tufts from a former student of Balch, Elizabeth Bottomley Noyce of Medomak, Maine. The professor emeritus was a founding member of Tufts' drama department, which he chaired for 26 years, and was one of the moving forces behind the use of the arena stage in academic theater in this country.

HS juniors can apply

'Project aim' at Coast Guard Academy

For five days in August, high school juniors can participate in "Project AIM", a five-day crash course on life as a cadet. Known as Project AIM (Academy Introduction Mission), this program is designed to familiarize them with cadet life at the Coast Guard Academy, New London, Ct.

The students are chosen by the Coast Guard Auxiliary and are trained and drilled as if they were new cadets. They learn to march, dress and behave as Coast Guard Academy cadets. They are separated into platoons and each platoon competes in a variety of athletic events and close order drills. Instruction in sailing and seamanship plus tours of Coast Guard vessels and aircraft are also provided. It's a tough program and the students are worked hard, no punches are pulled and they return home with an accurate account of Academy life.

The AIM program is sponsored by the Coast Guard Auxiliary, which assumes all costs including transportation.

Students are screened for academic and athletic proficiency by the Coast Guard Auxiliary and those chosen to attend are sent to the Coast Guard Academy for a first hand look at what to expect as a cadet at the academy and what a career in the Coast Guard can mean.

Certainly the AIM program is a contributing factor in the decision of young men and women to attend the Coast Guard Academy. Last year, 76 percent of the students who participated in Project AIM applied for admission.

Coast Guard Auxiliary units are presently interviewing prospective candidates. For further details students interested in Project AIM should contact their high school guidance department or Coast Guard Auxiliary Career Coordination Officer, Edward LeClair, 23 Newhall Street, Lowell, Ma. 01852 or call 458-0668.

"Makes you happy!"

Regular eye examinations can greatly reduce the incidence of glaucoma, according to a recent broadcast sponsored by the Columbia Presbyterian Medical Center and The Prudential Insurance Company.

Dr. Robert Shaffer, director of the Glaucoma Clinic at the University of California, San Francisco, says "early detection is crucial in glaucoma. Ophthalmologists can detect increased pressure in the eye, damage to the optic nerve or loss of peripheral vision through a painless screening process. These common symptoms of glaucoma may not be recognized by the patient until a great deal of vision has been lost."

"Glaucoma is a series of diseases which have intraocular pressure and the tendency for optic nerve damage as their common denominator," explains Dr. Shaffer.

Audubon Society

Coming Attractions

By William Pacino

For the naturally curious

The camps, workshops and field seminars being offered this year by the National Audubon Society are by no means strictly for the birds - though learning more about birds is often an important part of the experience.

What the programs offer, according to the Society's brochure, are fascinating ways "to search, stalk, probe, poke, discover and explore."

At one and two-week sessions of Audubon camps in Maine, Connecticut, Wisconsin and Wyoming, naturalists lead adventurous field trips and conduct informal outdoor classes. Working in small groups, adult campers learn how birds adapt for flight, why "fairy rings" of mushrooms spring up overnight, how a milkweed flower attracts a bee, why barnacles grow in colonies. Optional activities include swimming, rock-climbing, hiking, canoeing, stargazing, and loafing.

The Maine Camp is located on 333-acre Hog Island in Muscongus Bay. The Connecticut camp is located in Greenwich.

For more information, contact Audubon, 4150 Darley, Boulder, Colo. 80303, tel. 303-499-5409.

The feeling had been tugging at me for two weeks. It all started when I watched some rather crazy bicyclists brave the end of the raw weather. I observed the heavy sweatshirts, gloves and winter caps under their bicycling helmets.

At the newsstand, I caught myself scanning each rack for the latest issues of bicycling magazines. When I took the trash down to the cellar, I would sneak a glance at the silver Centaur bicycle resting patiently over in the corner.

The urge to go bicycling, especially in the Spring, had returned again. Hoorah!

For the record, I have already ridden once this year, spending two hours touring the streets and bike paths of Wellesley, while waiting for someone to run a computer program at Babson College. I was slightly disappointed, as there was nothing particularly interesting to see on those streets and roads. I enjoyed the exercise and being outdoors, but the most I got out of that tour was a wind-burned face and a sore derriere.

I have a plan to write up a series of articles on bike paths and spots well suited for bicycling. If you know of some good areas in your community, write me, car of this local newspaper, and I will incorporate your information in the articles.

While on the subject of bicycling, I have grand visions of broken-glass-free riding with the bottle bill now in effect. That would make the summer rides a lot more enjoyable.

FACTS

Some lawmakers have proposed that new federal and postal employees be covered under Social Security instead of the retirement system they have had for some 60 years: the Civil Service Retirement Fund. This change, experts say, would result in increased government obligations.

While the Civil Service Retirement System is financially sound now, coverage of new federal and postal workers would lead to its bankruptcy and that would cost taxpayers an estimated $185 billion.

Friend wins award

Friend Building Centers, of Lowell, Mass., have received a 1982 Home Center of the Year award from the national business publication, Home Center Magazine.

Paul London, president, and Sheldon Jaffe, treasurer, accepted an award of merit in the special departments category Feb. 28 at the opening general session of the National Home Center Show in Dallas.

The firm is one of only 13 home center retailers, from throughout the U.S. to receive the coveted award which recognizes outstanding accomplishments in the $45 billion home center industry.

Friend Building Centers received the award of merit in the special departments category for an outstanding kitchen department that displays more than 200 styles of kitchen cabinets.

Home centers are retailing organizations offering complete selections of home improvement products and services, including lumber and building materials, hardware and a broad range of other home repair, maintenance and remodeling goods. These retailers serve do-it-yourself consumers and often are a source of supply for home remodeling contractors and small home builders.

The most recent profile of the home center market, compiled by Home Center Magazine, shows 8,800 firms operated 26,000 individual home centers in 1981 with a sales volume of some $45 billion.

Aspiring software makers plan a sales surge

By Francine Kiefer
Business correspondent of
The Christian Science Monitor

Boston
Software companies are playing king of the hill. They all want to be on top, but is there room for them all up there?

Information Unlimited Software Inc. (IUS) and Lotus Development Corporation are two software publishers aggressively vying for a piece of the crown.

Lotus just started shipping its product on Jan. 26. But the retail value of this first shipment was over $4 million. "Lotus came out of nowhere," says Lynne Baron, a research consultant at Quantum Science Corporation.

IUS is a five-year-old company. Last year sales totaled around $8 million, more than triple the 1981 level. In a month, the Sausalito, Calif.-based company will have opened a Boston sales office. At least four more offices will dot the country by year-end. "IUS is a leading company — but they're not the only one," says Dr. Harold Kinne, senior vice-president of Future Computing Inc., a research firm.

Of the independent software publishers — that is, those that aren't IBM, Tandy, Atari, Apple, etc. — Lotus believes it can be in the top five in terms of sales, and IUS is aiming to be No. 3. Both expect to get there within two years. But they've got a climb ahead — the reigning companies right now have sales in the $30 million to $40 million range, says Dr. Kinne, and include names like VisiCorp, Microsoft, and Micropro.

"Productivity software" is the route both companies are taking to the top. This software, mostly used by business, gives computer users instructions on how to do such tasks as word processing, data processing, and financial spreadsheets.

Note the delivery time stated. Allow plenty of time before holidays so you won't be disappointed by a late delivery.

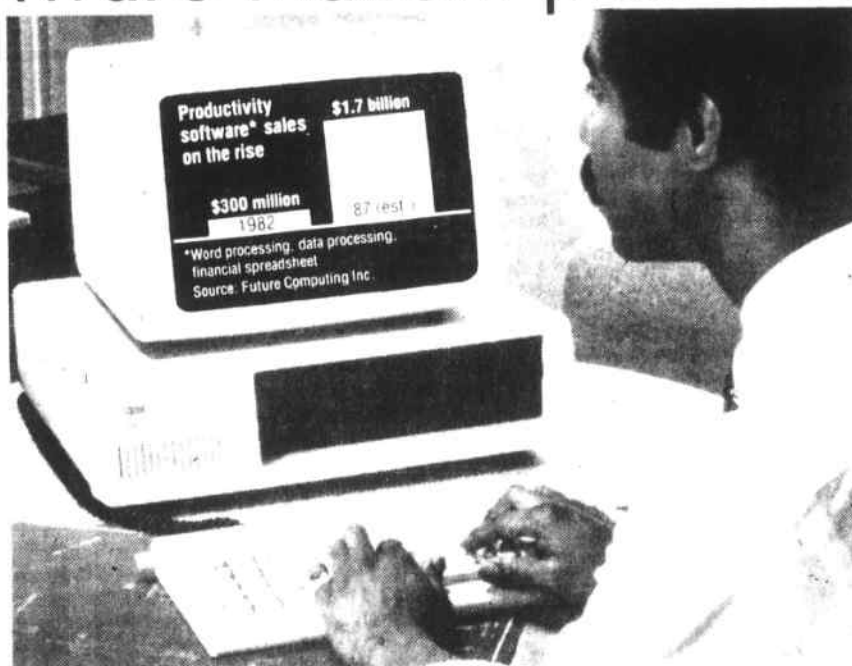

Find out about the merchant's return policy. If it isn't stated anywhere, ask before you order.

Keep a copy of your order form.

Make a note of the merchant's name, address, and the date you sent your order.

Hold on to your cancelled checks and charge-account records. If you have a problem later, these papers will be necessary to prove your case.

What to do if you have a problem shopping by mail. Your first step should be to write directly to the company. (Remember to keep a copy of the letter!) Tell them about the problem. If it's not resolved, call your local consumer protection agency or cooperative extension office. We may be able to help you.

But their product similarity stops there. Lotus, in Cambridge, Mass., expects to ride into the No. 5 slot on the newest wave of software — integrated software. Instead of having a different software package for each program, a lot of programs are rolled into one package. Apple's newest computer, Lisa, uses this concept. And VisiCorp is supposed to offer integrated software this summer.

The Lotus package, called "1-2-3," combines a spreadsheet, text editing, business graphics, and a kind of filing system all in one program. "Executives do a lot in a given day," a Lotus spokeswoman said. "They don't just sit at a word processor all day long cranking out memos and letters."

William Lohse, vice-president of sales and marketing at IUS, says that "someday, integrated software will be the way that software goes," but it's not what many people want now. Integrated software can't perform individual tasks well enough, he criticizes. For instance, "none of these packages, even Lisa's, has a decent word processor."

That is why IUS is sticking to high-performance individual packages that can be combined with one another. For instance, while using its word processing program, you can pull figures from its data-base programs.

"The tendency at the large corporations is to buy the integrated solution," says Quantum's Ms. Baron. "Managers are willing to sacrifice something like word processing because they aren't primarily writers."

But, Ms. Baron says, "there is still a market for IUS. Not everyone wants to pay $600 to $1,000 for a lot of [features] they won't use." The 1-2-3 program retails for $475. IUS's EasyWriter word processor sells for $175.

If some computer experts criticize IUS for not falling in step with integrated software, they can't fault the firm's marketing strategy. IUS has two hefty contracts under its belt, one with IBM for its Personal Computer and, more recently, with Texas Instruments for its new business computer. IUS sells their products from its "Easy family" — EasyWriter, EasySpeller, EasyFiler, and EasyPlanner. IBM and TI put their own logos on the products. IUS also sells its products independently through computer stores.

Lotus has a three-prong strategy: relying on another software marketer to distribute and service 1-2-3, dealerships, and a national accounts program where large corporations would buy in bulk. Lotus also says some major computer manufacturers are interested.

But the ultimate characteristic that will make or break a software company, Lohse says, is service. "We want to be No. 1 in support." Five of the company's 60 employees man phones to answer consumer questions. Unlimited phone help, a newsletter, software updates, and replacement of faulty disks can be bought by a user for 20 percent of the cost of the software.

Part of good service is software that's easy to use. Lohse adds IUS will soon be coming out with lessons on cassette tape for its programs and shortly after that, the program itself will teach users about the software. "These aren't innovative ideas," Lohse admits, but it's their quality that will make them winners.

Market researchers say it's too early to predict how the market-share pie will slice.

"The software field is growing so fast that when we look at a company, if it hasn't moved its physical location in 12 months, something's wrong," Kinne says.

Lotus and IUS must at least be on the right track. They both moved into more spacious offices last year.

'Master Harold' the best dramatic production this year in Boston

By RICK PEARL

Athol Fugard's mesmerizing new play "MASTER HAROLD" and the boys" is the best production that the Boston theater scene has offered this season.

Starring James Earl Jones, Delroy Lindo, and Charles Michael Wright, "MASTER HAROLD" is a compact, stirring tale of the relationship between a young white man and two black servants under his family's employ in South Africa in 1950.

"MASTER HAROLD" is based on an incident from the playwright's own life and is so well written that it is completed in just over an hour and a half with no intermission.

The young man, Hally (played by Wright) stands for Fugard himself, while the older of the two servants, Sam (played by Jones), is based on Sam Semela, to whom the play is dedicated. Sam served, as a father figure to Hally.

Sam and Willy (played by Lindo), in fact, are more of a family to young Hally than his own parents. They, in turn, have adopted him as something of a son.

Hally's father, it seems, is a cripple and an alcoholic, and has not been much of an inspiration for the boy. In fact Hally builds up so much resentment against his father that it leads to the mesmerizing conclusion of the play.

The father has been discharged from the hospital, where he had been taken for a brief rehabilitative stay. It was too brief for Hally's liking, and he bemoans the fact that he'll be responsible for catering to his father's every whim now, instead of the nurses at the hospital.

Sam, a self-educated, fun-loving, and innocently profound man scolds Hally for his lack of respect for his father, which triggers an emotion-ridden scene in which the young man turns on the two "boys" in a barrage of racist vitriole.

Jones is fabulous as Sam. He creates a great man for us, a man whom the audience respects as much as Hally and Willy do. Lindo is equally superb as Willy. His character is not as loquacious as Sam, but his actions and facial expressions communicate his feelings just as well. Wright is perfect as the haughty and yet insecure Hally.

Quite honestly, "MASTER HAROLD" and the boys" is the best dramatic play in Boston this year. It is a production that seizes your emotions and carries them through to the conclusion on a constant high.

Nominated for three Tony Awards in 1982, this is a play that will make you think, but won't drag you down with a lot of philosophical innuendo. It doesn't need to. In 105 minutes its point becomes readily apparent.

The baboon is the largest of the monkeys.

JAMES EARL JONES stars as "Sam" in Athol Fugard's newest play "MASTER HAROLD" and the boys" which is appearing at the Wilbur Theatre in Boston.

FIGURES

Civil Service Retirement benefits are a source of tax revenue; Social Security benefits are not. The extension of coverage would cost the Federal Government $2 billion in lost taxes each year.

Coverage of federal and postal workers has been rejected by Congress five times in the past. A coalition of 25 organizations representing active and retired federal and postal employees, has formed FAIR—Fund for Assuring an Independent Retirement—and hope it will be rejected again.

A number of Americans concerned about the cost and the quality of the government service we receive are writing their legislators and asking where they stand on this issue. They are reaching representatives at the House of Representatives, Washington, D.C. 20515 and senators at the U.S. Senate, Washington, D.C. 20510.

ATTENTION: Parents of Teenagers

I am Mrs. Barbara M. Hugh and I would like you to meet my daughter, Nancy. All through her teenage years she has had a serious acne problem. Her skin was always broken out with blemishes, blackheads, and whiteheads. Within the last six years I have literally spent hundreds of dollars on Dermatologists and prescriptions with very little if any improvement.

After reading an impressive advertisement for a professional European facial by James Olivadotti, a licensed Esthetician, I made Nancy's first appointment. After only one facial with James, there was considerable improvement in her complexion. By her fourth facial, and only two months later, seventy-five percent of Nancy's skin problems were alleviated.

By looking at my daughter, you can see how pleased she is with her new complexion, not to mention the confidence that she has regained in herself.

I wish I had known about James and his expertise in Esthetics before I had spent so much time and money trying other skin treatments.

Parents! Please do your teenage son or daughter a favor! At the first sign of blemishes or blackheads, call James for an appointment. You and your teenager will be amazed at the results!

FILMETER

A capsule look at cinema

FILMETER is compiled by Dick Kleiner in Hollywood and the NEA staff in Hollywood and New York.

NEW RELEASE

THE KING OF COMEDY (PG) — Robert De Niro, Jerry Lewis (Drama-comedy) Martin Scorsese's grim comedy presents a taut but exhilarating look at the underside of show business. De Niro plays another in his parade of borderline wackos, this time, a nebbishy, would-be stand-up comic obsessed with a talk-show host (Lewis). The ending strains credulity — or does it? Grade: A-minus

GENERAL RELEASE

BEST FRIENDS (PG) — Bart Reynolds, Goldie Hawn. (Romantic comedy) This is the slight story of a pair of screenwriters whose loving relationship founders when they get married. It has some hilarious moments — maybe three of them — but the rest of it is composed of endless talk. Mostly dull talk, at that. Grade: C

THE DARK CRYSTAL (PG) — (Adventure) Mystical puppetry minus the usual Jim Henson whimsy makes this a rather dull but eye-filling puppet "Fantasia." The dying members of warring civilizations vie for the crystal that will assure them power over a world created entirely by the film's creators. While the absence of any human performer compromises a viewer's identification with the events depicted, the visual magic of the movie makes it worthwhile for older children on up. Grade: A-minus

FRANCES (R) — Jessica Lange, Kim Stanley, Sam Shepard. (Drama) If the film biography of film stars wasn't a dead genre before, this Hollywood horror story will surely kill it. By now we know life off the silver screen is never as good as it is on, and this movie does little more than reiterate that tired message. Acting job by Lange is film's sole strong point, but it is very strong indeed. Grade: B-minus

THE LORDS OF DISCIPLINE (R) — David Keith, Robert Prosky, G.D. Spradlin. (Drama) "Taps" meets "An Officer and a Gentleman" in this taut, but occasionally semi-bokey drama, based on Pat Conroy's ("The Great Santini") novel about right and wrong at a Southern military academy in 1964. With its emphasis on one man's (seemingly insurmountable) quest for justice and fair play, "Lords" is reminiscent of "The Verdict" — decked out in dress blues. But a good dose of idealism and heroism is always welcome. Grade: B

LOVESICK (PG) — Dudley Moore, Elizabeth McGovern. (Comedy) Psychiatry, New York-style, comes under comic attack in this unrealized attempt written and directed by Marshall Brickman. The plot — a diminutive shrink (Moore) falls for a ditzy playwright patient (McGovern) — never really gets off the couch, although bits of right-on humor do keep the movie from suffering a complete breakdown. Grade: B-minus

SOPHIE'S CHOICE (R) — Meryl Streep, Kevin Kline, Peter MacNicol. (Drama) Based on William Styron's novel, this is the story of a young Polish woman, survivor of Auschwitz, and the two men who meet her in Brooklyn and fall in love with her. But, more, it is the story of her tortured past, and its mysteries. Unlike most movie adaptations of novels, which usually ignore the story, this is almost too faithful, with too much detail. Hence, it is overlong. Still, it is powerful and Miss Streep's performance is superb. The R rating is only for language. Grade: B-plus

Where to get help to see if a tax shelter can help you

By Ron Scherer

Business correspondent of The Christian Science Monitor
Fair Haven, N.J.

Robert Stanger & Co.'s hot line has gone cold. Mr. Stanger, who analyzes tax shelters from his offices here, maintains the hot line for subscribers who want to check out potential tax shelters. From November to late December, it is constantly busy. After Dec. 31, the line stops ringing.

But it shouldn't. Now is the time to consider tax shelters — not on Dec. 31, when promoters dust off old shelters that relieve you of your money and provide themselves with enough income to keep going until Dec. 31 of the next year.

There is little doubt that legitimate tax shelters can have a major effect on your tax situation. According to Mr. Stanger, however, you should not consider one unless you have a relatively high income. "Generally speaking," he said in an interview, "a tax shelter should not reduce your income below $45,000 to $50,000 per year for a joint return."

At this income level, a couple's marginal tax bracket (the rate at which their last dollar earned is taxed) would be 38 percent. Since most tax shelters are priced to produce a reasonable return for investors in at least this tax bracket, it doesn't pay to buy one if your joint income is lower.

But as Mr. Stanger illustrates in his book, "Tax Shelters, The Bottom Line" (Fair Haven, N.J., Robert A. Stanger & Co., $32.50), if you have a relatively high income, a good tax shelter can quickly increase your net worth as well as your disposable income. For example, suppose you have an income of $100,000 a year and personal deductions of $15,000 annually and exemptions worth $5,000. Your taxable income (in 1982) is $80,000 and your tax bill is $31,318.

With an income of $100,000 and a tax bill of $31,318, you then have disposable income of $68,682. But assume you have personal expenses of $54,000. Thus, you have $14,682 left for investment.

Now, add to the equation an oil and gas tax shelter which cost $25,000. In the first year of the oil and gas program, you can deduct 85 percent of the cost, or $21,250. Thus, your personal balance sheet changes rather dramatically. You still have $100,000 income. But deducting the oil and gas expenses, plus the same personal deductions and your exemptions, gives you taxable income of $58,750 (vs. $80,000 before the shelter). Your new tax bill is $20,693, or $10,625 less.

Thus, with an income of $100,000 and a tax bill of $20,693, you have disposable income of $79,307. Your personal expenses remain at $54,000 but you have available for investment $25,307. As Stanger notes in his book, "That's 72 percent more money working for you with the oil and gas investment than without it." And this is not counting any return from the oil and gas wells.

Although Mr. Stanger still likes well-designed and -executed oil and gas shelters, he recommends that an investor who expects to have a continuing high stream of income begin with a leveraged real estate shelter. Preferably, the investment will be in apartments, as opposed to commercial real estate, in areas of the country that are growing.

Even if inflation remains at 5 percent a year for the next several years, he believes an investor will triple his investment in 7 to 10 years when the general partner tries to sell the investments purchased by the limited partners.

There are other advantages to real estate, he notes. When buying it, an investor is buying an asset. When buying an oil and drilling program, he's buying expenses — with the possibility of hitting oil and gas. In buying real estate, Stanger comments, "the results are pretty predictable. Real estate is not subject to rapid change." Unlike an oil and gas shelter, where a big oil strike can quickly increase the value of your investment by 500 to 600 percent, real estate appreciates more slowly. But it does appreciate, and more people are familiar with housing than with oil wells.

This is not to say Mr. Stanger is opposed to investing in oil and gas tax shelters. In fact, with drilling costs down dramatically, he thinks this is a good time for an investor to put money in a good drilling program. Even prospects of declining oil prices don't discourage him. To attract investors, promoters of legitimate oil and gas tax shelters have increased investors' return. Currently, oil and gas reserves can be purchased to return 20 to 25 percent annually to the partnership, compared with 15 percent last year. Even if the price of oil drops to $20 a barrel, some programs would continue to return 10 to 15 percent a year. Thus, if the prices just remain steady, the returns — if oil is found — can be handsome.

In buying a tax shelter, an individual must also decide whether to buy a public one (one that has been registered with the Securities and Exchange Commission) or a private offering, made to a small, select group of investors.

The advantage of a public offering is that it discloses all fees and expenses. These can be hefty and can have a significant effect on the final return. Public offerings are also usually larger and more diversified, spreading the risks. Investors usually have to pay for the program in one swipe, however.

A private shelter can often be paid for over a number of years, thus aiding an individual's cash flow, helping him to afford it. But with private shelters it is usually more difficult to gauge expenses and fees. "Things are not what they seem in private deals," Mr. Stanger warns. He says that in private deals it's important to know the "philosophy of the people you are dealing with."

It is also important to know how successful the parties have been in the past. For most public and many private oil and gas deals, it's possible to check the general partner's record by asking your stockbroker to show you a copy of the Stanger Drilling Fund Yearbook. With real estate, it's more difficult. But many brokers have the Stanger Register, which provides program comparisons, or the Stanger Report, also a guide to tax shelter investing. If neither is available, ask for verification of the general partner's record.

People who do decide on a tax shelter should make sure it's legal. In the past, some felt that it paid to cheat. The penalty was only the tax due, plus 6 percent interest. Under the Tax Equity and Fiscal Responsibility Act of 1982, however, the Internal Revenue Service can now charge interest based on the prime interest rate. Currently, it is charging 10 percent, compounded daily from the date of the filing. In addition, the IRS can impose a nondeductible penalty of up to 30 percent on what it considers a "substantial understatement" of income tax.

Even more important, the IRS will now be looking at the total-gross-income figure an individual reports instead of adjusted gross income. The effect of this is likely to be simple. The possibility of being audited increases substantially.

For example, under the old system, if a person had total gross income of $200,000 last year, he could shelter $180,000 of it and as far as the IRS computer was concerned his adjusted gross income was only $20,000. The likelihood of being audited with only a $20,000 gross income are quite small. But, as Stanley Jensen, an assistant to Henry W. Bloch, the president of H & R Block notes, with a $200,000 income, the chance of being audited is substantially increased, since the IRS computers are geared toward auditing such returns.

Some hot tax shelters are just warmed-over come-ons

By a business correspondent of
The Christian Science Monitor

Fair Haven, N.J.

Old tax shelters never die, they come back next year with a new cover on them.

All an investor need do to prove this is visit Robert A. Stanger & Co. here. A Stanger employee can pull out of his files the prospectus for an oil-technology tax shelter. He tells you this is the third consecutive year he's seen this particular shelter — with only the name changed on the prospectus. "Everything else is exactly the same," he says.

He points to still another prospectus that has the same drilling prospects and management as one sold by promoters of the previous year.

Stanger also accumulates prospectuses relating to the latest "tax shelter fads."

Among the hottest of these in the last few years have been the oil-technology shelters. In these deals, the promoters announce that a so-called "revolutionary" new method has been found to extract oil or gas from the ground. The limited partners will pay royalties on this new process. The royalties will come from the income derived from any oil or gas drilled.

The problem with these deals is twofold. First, the investor will have to pay taxes on the "phantom" income that is used to pay the royalty fee. Thus, he has a tax liability on income he never received. Second, the royalty fee charged is often higher than it should be — which greases the pockets of the people involved in the shelter.

Then there are the "bookplate deals," which involve investors paying inflated prices for the "plates" used to print books. To justify charging inflated prices, the promoters appear to have them "appraised." And, since you must be able to show the IRS that you were trying to make a profit, the promoters will charge you an additional fee for marketing. According to one Stanger employee, most of these deals are ruses. "You're better off giving your money to the Boy Scouts," he said. "At least you know where it's going."

FBI has eye on NE crime

Organized crime, along with foreign intelligence and white collar crime, are top priorities with the Federal Bureau of Investigation, according to Supervisory Special Agent John M. Morris, who is in charge of the Boston Organized Crime Division, which oversees activities in Massachusetts, Maine, New Hampshire, and Rhode Island. Inherent in the organized crime business (which is second only to oil in profit making and above the automobile industry) is drug trafficking.

Backed by President Reagan and the U.S. Attorney General's Office, the FBI and the Federal Drug Enforcement Agency will tackle an eight point program to cut down on the narcotics traffic in this country. The budget for the program will be $120 to 150 million, hardly matching the figure for profits made by organized criminals who haul in approximately $150 billion annually (half of what the U.S. spends in defense). Of these sales, 450,000 people are addicted to heroin, some 10 billion use cocaine and some 25 billion use marijuana.

"New England is a prime area for drug smuggling. The airports and the seaports make it ideal," says Morris, who spoke to an audience of more than 200 at the November luncheon lecture sponsored by the Community Services Department of Mount Pleasant Hospital, a Lynn alcoholism rehabilitation hospital. "Drug use is now entering professional sports and to give you an example, cocaine decreases the tolerance of pain. Can you imagine a football player who cannot take hits or blocks?"

Business representatives, health care agents, industrialists and community members attended the lecture to learn about drug use in the workplace. Morris turned the problem back to them.

"The problem of drugs in the workplace is so large that law enforcement agents cannot deal with it on a company level. You need programs for education and awareness. Drugs in the workplace are a spawning ground for criminal activities."

Drug abuse in the workplace costs businesses approximately $65 billion a year. Accident rates are two to four times greater for drug abusers. Absenteeism is two to three times greater, according to Francis J. Elliott, who was a special agent for the Drug Enforcement Agency for eight years and who is an investigation consultant for National Securities, Inc., Lowell.

"The workers' compensation is staggering. Insurance goes up. There are weapons. The company takes on a poor image and a low morale. There is intimidation of supervisors," says Elliott whose investigations often take him into private institutions where he finds a high level of drug distribution.

Elliott and Morris recommend employee assistance programs, such as those supervised by the seventeen year old Mount Pleasant Hospital, where absenteeism, tardiness, low productivity, poor behavior, attitude and other aspects of job performance are monitored.

Oh yes, pamper those flowers!

Here's your dilemma: you love those fresh flowers, but they're not lasting long enough. What to do? Flowers, like other living, breathing things, need occasional attention and, frankly, a little pampering when you get your purchase home practically guarantees a longer life for your flowers. Here are some tips:

1. Make certain that you have thoroughly washed your vases and containers with hot, soapy water. This kills any bacteria which may be present.

2. The water you use should be fresh from the tap and warm to the touch. Never place fresh flowers in cold tap water. This one mistake can cut the life of your flowers in half! Professional florists know the importance of high quality water. In fact, the water they use is specially treated to eliminate impurities.

3. Always add a preservative solution to the water. Research has proven that preservatives greatly extend the vase-life of fresh flowers.

4. Before placing your flowers in their vase with preservative solution, remove all leaves from the stems that go under water.

Next, cut about one inch from each flower stem under water! This step prevents air from entering the stem and causing premature wilting. Did you know that you can often revive a wilted, or "tired" flower by cutting its stem underwater!

5. Check your flowers' water supply daily. If it becomes cloudy — change it; always keep the water level near the top of your vase or container.

Other things to consider: once inside your home or office, fresh flowers must be placed in the right location. Select a spot where the temperature is cool and there is bright light, but not direct sunlight. Avoid all drafts, as well as heating and air conditioning ducts. Appliances that give off heat are a no-no.

Okay — you've followed the steps recommended by professionals — but, how long should those fresh flowers last? Here's a handy chart that provides the answer:

Anemone 5-8 days; Baby's breath 3-12 days; Carnations 4-14 days; Chrysanthemums 5-16 days; Daffodil 4-6 days; Daisy 3-4 days; Gladiolus 4-11 days; Iris 3-5 days; Lily 5-8 days; Marigold 4-9 days; Orchids 3-5 days; Rose 4-11 days; Tulip 3-5 days.

For maximum vase-life always use a quality floral preservative.

Now you know the secret. If you follow these simple, fun steps you'll permit maximum development of flower size, intensity of color and, importantly, probably double the enjoyable life of your fresh flowers. So — be good to your flowers and they'll be good to you!

REAL ESTATE

NEED YOUR HOUSE!

HAVE BUYERS waiting. Free opinion of values, no obligation.

NATIONAL CARPET WAREHOUSE STORE

LADIES & GENTLEMEN YOUR ATTENTION PLEASE.

If you want to save serious money;
you must read this ad.

Now, I'm not talking about tiny — itsy-bitsy savings or make-believe savings. I'm talking about real big, honest to goodness savings.

Let's be honest. No one is going to save anything unless they're willing to buy something.

This Saturday, March 19th (for one day only) I'm going to show you how to save a lot of money. Not a little bit of money — but a lot of money!

Let me give you some plain facts. Suppose you want 25 yards of carpet for your living room.

TAKE A LOOK AT THE FOLLOWING EXAMPLES

... A deep pile plush — distinctive in every way.
Reg. Price: $350.00
But on Saturday, it will cost you only $175.00

... Carved nylon textured — will give your room a warm personal touch.
Reg. Price: $300.00
This Saturday it's only $150.00

... Saxony designed — ultra-thick for total richness.
Reg. Price: $400.00
Saturday, you can buy it for half that price.
Just $200.00

Maybe you need 50 yards for a family room or playroom.
... Hard wearing 100% Nylon — made to handle heavy traffic.
Reg. Price: $500.00
This Saturday $250.00.
Just think, 50 yards of carpet for your entire family room or playroom for only $250.00

... How about this — a tone on tone sculptured short shag.
Reg. Price: $700.00
Not so this Saturday, you'll pay $350.00 and no more.

... I have remnants for — your halls, your stairs, your vans.
Starting at $1.00 per yard.
You'll save on every yard.

... I'm going to sell — a full 150 yard roll of commercial carpet for $1.00 per square yard.
Reg. Price: $8.00
Save $140.00!
Limit: (One 20 yard cut per customer)

... Still another full 150 yard roll of heavy duty commercial — just $1.99 per square yard.
Reg. Price: $10.00
Save $160.00!
Limit: (One 20 yard cut per customer)

... Take a look at this! "OVERSIZE RUG-SUPER SAVERS" THOUSANDS at HALF PRICE and LESS!
Sizes 12 ft. up to 37 ft. Every color, every style, for every room. Wait until you see these rugs. They are absolutely beautiful — and unbelievable buy! They made us famous. IMPORTANT NEWS: over one hundred (100) of these "OVERSIZE RUG-SUPER SAVERS" will sell for just $77.00 each this Saturday.
Reg. Price on this one rug was $400.00
★ You save $323.00. ★
Don't forget — thousands to choose from. Every color, every style, every size — all at one half the regular price — the remarkable "OVERSIZE RUG-SUPER SAVERS" ... only a National.

... I have Orientals I'm going to sell for — $199.00 that are worth over $450.00. You can save over $250.00 on these. They are beautiful.

... But I'm not finished yet — there's still more. MUCH MORE! On this Saturday (March 19th) for one day only, I'm going to sell over forty (40) 9 x 12 room size rugs for just $15.00 each.
Original Price on these rugs are $120.00 to $198.00
Save up to $183.00! Limit: (One per customer)

No matter what you buy this Saturday, you're going to save — and save big.

Now — Ladies and Gentlemen, this is only part of what's happening this Saturday (March 19th) at National Carpet. I could go on and on, but I don't have enough space to list everything here.

... But I have to mention one last thing. Because this is what it's all about. — This Saturday, March 19th (one day only) — MOST EVERYTHING — (over ONE MILLION DOLLARS) worth of carpets; full rolls, partial rolls, ends of rolls, closeouts, mill over-runs, perfects, slight irregulars and more — will go on sale at just ONE HALF of what they are worth. (You'll save up to 50% and more on everything) Think about it. Over ONE MILLION DOLLARS worth at just (half) their Regular Retail Price.

But listen. You don't have to buy a million dollars worth in order to save. All you have to do is buy only the amount you need. And you'll save! save! save!
